Direct Strategies

II. Cognitive strategies

A. Practicing

Repeating, Formally, Formula/Pattern, Recombining, Naturalistically

B. Analyzing and reasoning

Analyzing expressions, Analyzing Contrastively, Translating

C. Creating structure for input and output

Taking notes, Summarizing, Highlighting

Direct Strategies

III. Compensation strategies

A. Guessing intelligently

Using linguistic and other clues

B. Overcoming limitations in speaking and writing

Help!, Gesture, Avoidance, Topic

Selection, Adjusting/Approximating, Coining words,
Circumlocution/Synonym

When a learner recognizes the words ball, player, and winner in a conversation, it could be understood that it is about sport.

Indirect Strategies

I. Metacognitive strategies

A. Centering your learning

Focus, Paying attention, Just listening

B. Arranging and planning your learning

Organizing, Setting goals, Identifying purposes, Planning for task, Seeking times to practice

C. Evaluating your learning

Self-monitor, Self-evaluating

Indirect Strategies

II. Affective strategies

A. Lowering your anxiety

Matching strategies and tasks

Example: In a conversation, understanding the message without understanding every word

- Strategies to try:

- listening for key words (stress, intonation, pause)
- make educated guesses about the meaning based on the topic, context, who is speaking, tone, body lang.
- predicting what the speaker might say
- asking clarification questions
- asking the speaker to repeat, slow down

- Try to avoid:

- getting frustrated if (when) you don't understand every word

extraverted/introverted

Learning styles

How do you approach learning tasks?

closure-oriented/open

Learning styles

How do you deal with language rules?

deductive/inductive

What are “effective” language learning strategies?

Researchers have explored:

- what “good” or “effective” language learners do
- the relationship between strategy use and language learning outcomes
- the relationship between learning styles and language learning strategies

What the research says about strategies

- Students with greater ^(Cohen 2001) motivation tend to use strategies with greater frequency
- Students at higher levels of proficiency use a more diverse repertoire of strategies
- Students at higher levels of proficiency use self-monitoring strategies
- Students can learn new strategies

The “good” language learner...

- plans goals for language learning
- plans what to accomplish each day or week
- takes responsibility for finding opportunities to practice
- tries to notice errors and find out reasons for them
- checks over what he/s writes
- has a regular language –learning partner
- creates associations between new and familiar material
- puts new words in sentences/context
- tries to relax when feeling anxious
- study every day. Language learning is cumulative
