He is

She is

It is

We are

You are

They are going

A diagram illustrating the relationship between different forms of the verb 'to be' and the word 'going'. On the left side, there are seven lines of text: 'I am', 'He is', 'She is', 'It is', 'We are', 'You are', and 'They are'. On the right side, there is the word 'going'. Seven red arrows originate from the end of each line on the left and point towards the word 'going' on the right, indicating that each of these forms is used to describe a state of being or an action in progress.
