Magnitogorsk

Magnitogorsk is the second largest city in the Chelyabinsk region. One of the largest cities of ferrous metallurgy.

The city is located at the foot of Mount Magnetic, on the eastern slope of the Southern Urals, along both banks of the Ural River (right bank in Europe, left in Asia). Magnitogorsk is the 25th largest city and 47th most populated city in the Russian Federation.

Glorified:

The city "lit up" and in Hollywood - the action of the film "In Hell," the main role in which plays Jean-Claude Van Damme, occurs precisely in Magnitogorsk, although, judging from the numerous blunders, the film's director never visited, not that the Chelyabinsk region, but also Russia in general.

It is not at all surprising that Magnitogorsk entered the top three cities that played a special role in the Second World War. It was here that a huge amount of military products was produced - every third projectile that fell on the enemy's head, and every second tank was cast from Magnitogorsk steel. Also our city participates in sports matches together with Metallurg team.

The great team Metallurg, who not the first time receive the Gagarin Cup. Continually participate for our city in hockey tours.
