The Un-Americans

To Hell with Truth. The dilemma of whether to name names dominates the final part of this Timewatch documentary on the 'red scare' in postwar America. Witness Harvey Matusow, an ex-communist, at one stage testified that 126 'reds' were working for the Sunday New York Times when only 96 people worked on the paper. Yet for a time no one questioned his lies. His fame and fortune are contrasted with the experiences of those who refused to cooperate. In destroying some, but trusting others, did America lose faith in its most basic values?
