

ENGLAND

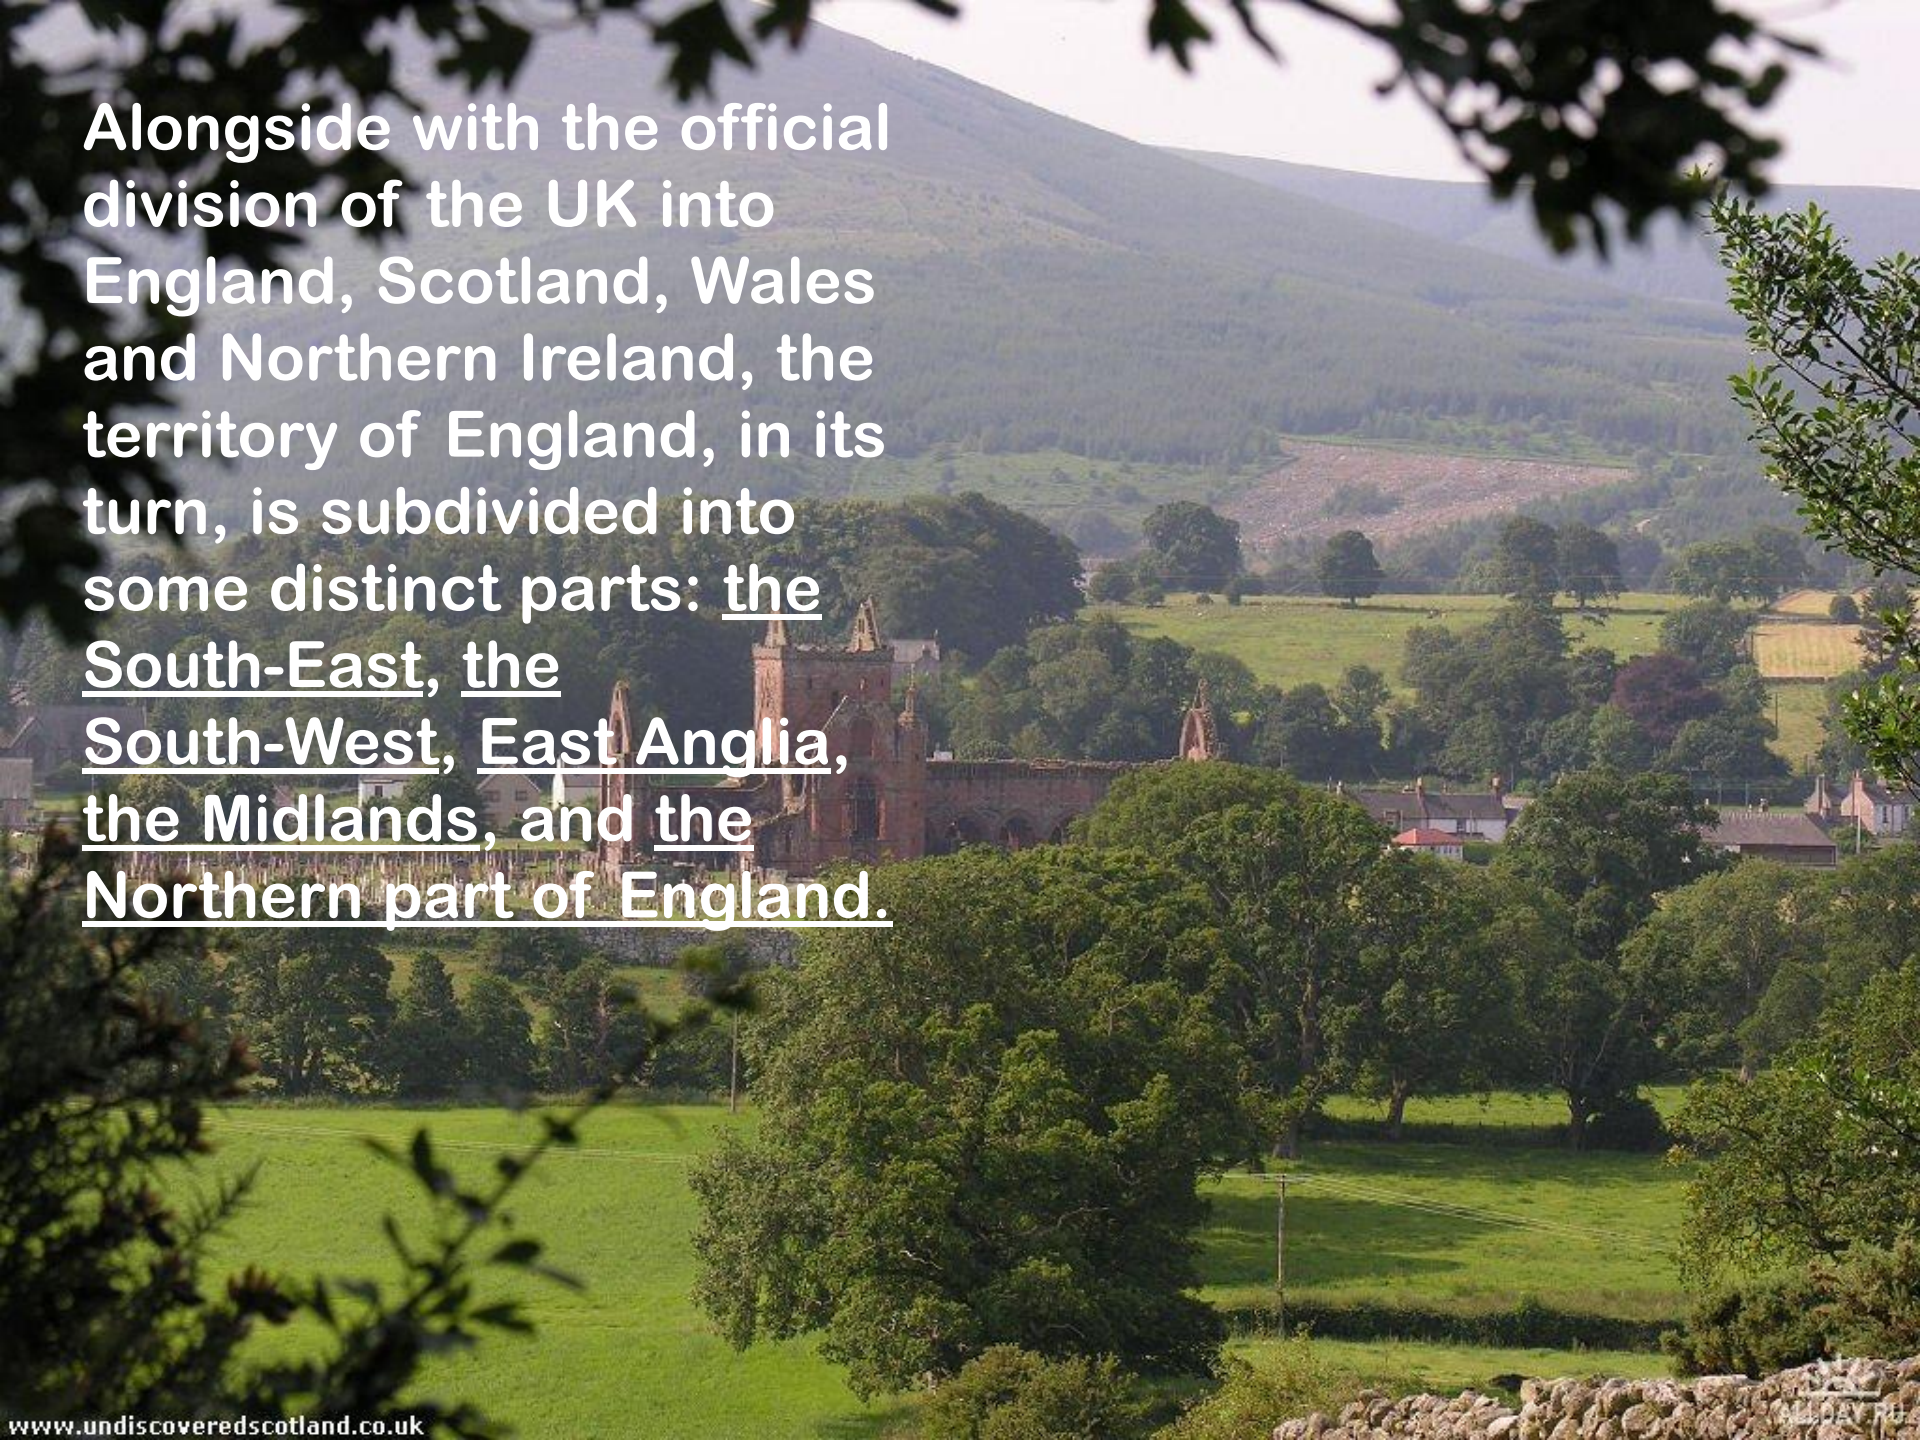

Photo by John Byford©

ENGLAND

England is the largest and the richest country of Great Britain. And London, its capital, is the 7th biggest city in the world.

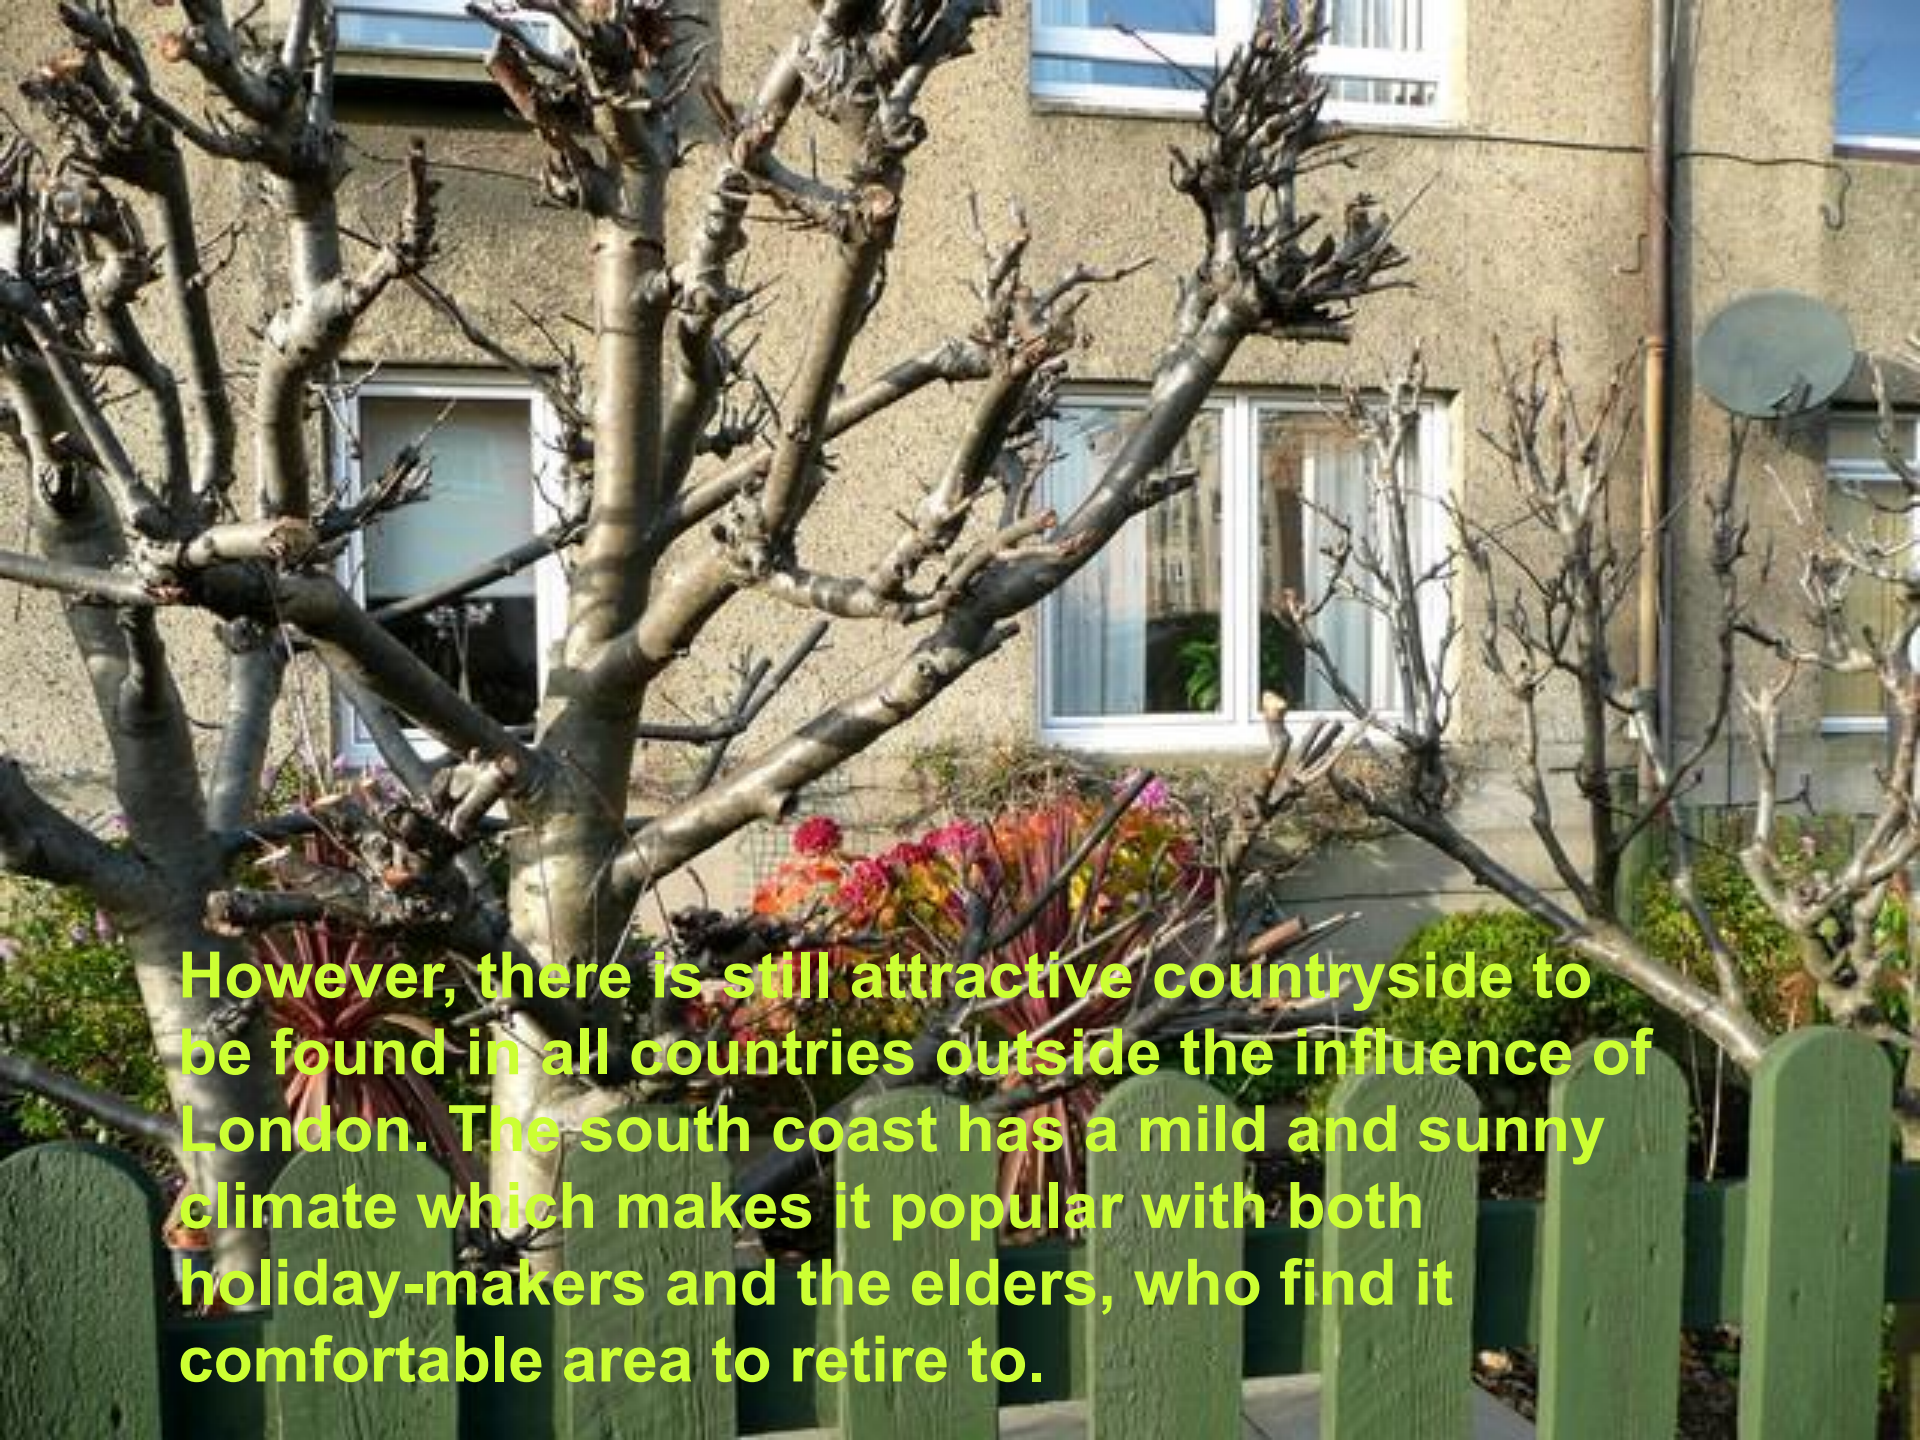

Alongside with the official division of the UK into England, Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland, the territory of England, in its turn, is subdivided into some distinct parts: the South-East, the South-West, East Anglia, the Midlands, and the Northern part of England.

The South-East of England is a low-lying land with gentle hills and a coast that is regular in outline. It is the most densely-populated region of England with only 11% of the land area of the country, but a third of the total population.

A large part of the region is affected by urban development: housing, factories, offices and a complex network of roads.

However, there is still attractive countryside to be found in all countries outside the influence of London. The south coast has a mild and sunny climate which makes it popular with both holiday-makers and the elders, who find it comfortable area to retire to.

Heathrow Airport by George Reekie

Heathrow Airport

In the South-West of the principal activity is farming. Although there are some very big farms,
most are small family ones.

SLOW
THROUGH VILLAGE

*Industry is centered on the 3 large ports:
Bristol, Portsmouth and Southampton.
Bristol is the place where aircraft are designed and built.*

The countryside is extremely beautiful, that is why people enjoy going there in order “to get away from it all.”

The South-West of England is famous for the great stone monument of Stonehenge

A photograph of a stone circle, likely Stonehenge, captured during the "blue hour" of twilight. The scene is dominated by a deep, monochromatic blue color palette. Several large, weathered stone monoliths stand in a circular arrangement on a flat, grassy plain. In the center of the sky, a bright, glowing full moon is visible, casting a soft light. The overall atmosphere is serene and mysterious. The text is overlaid in the lower half of the image.

which is probably the most remarkable of prehistoric remains in the country.

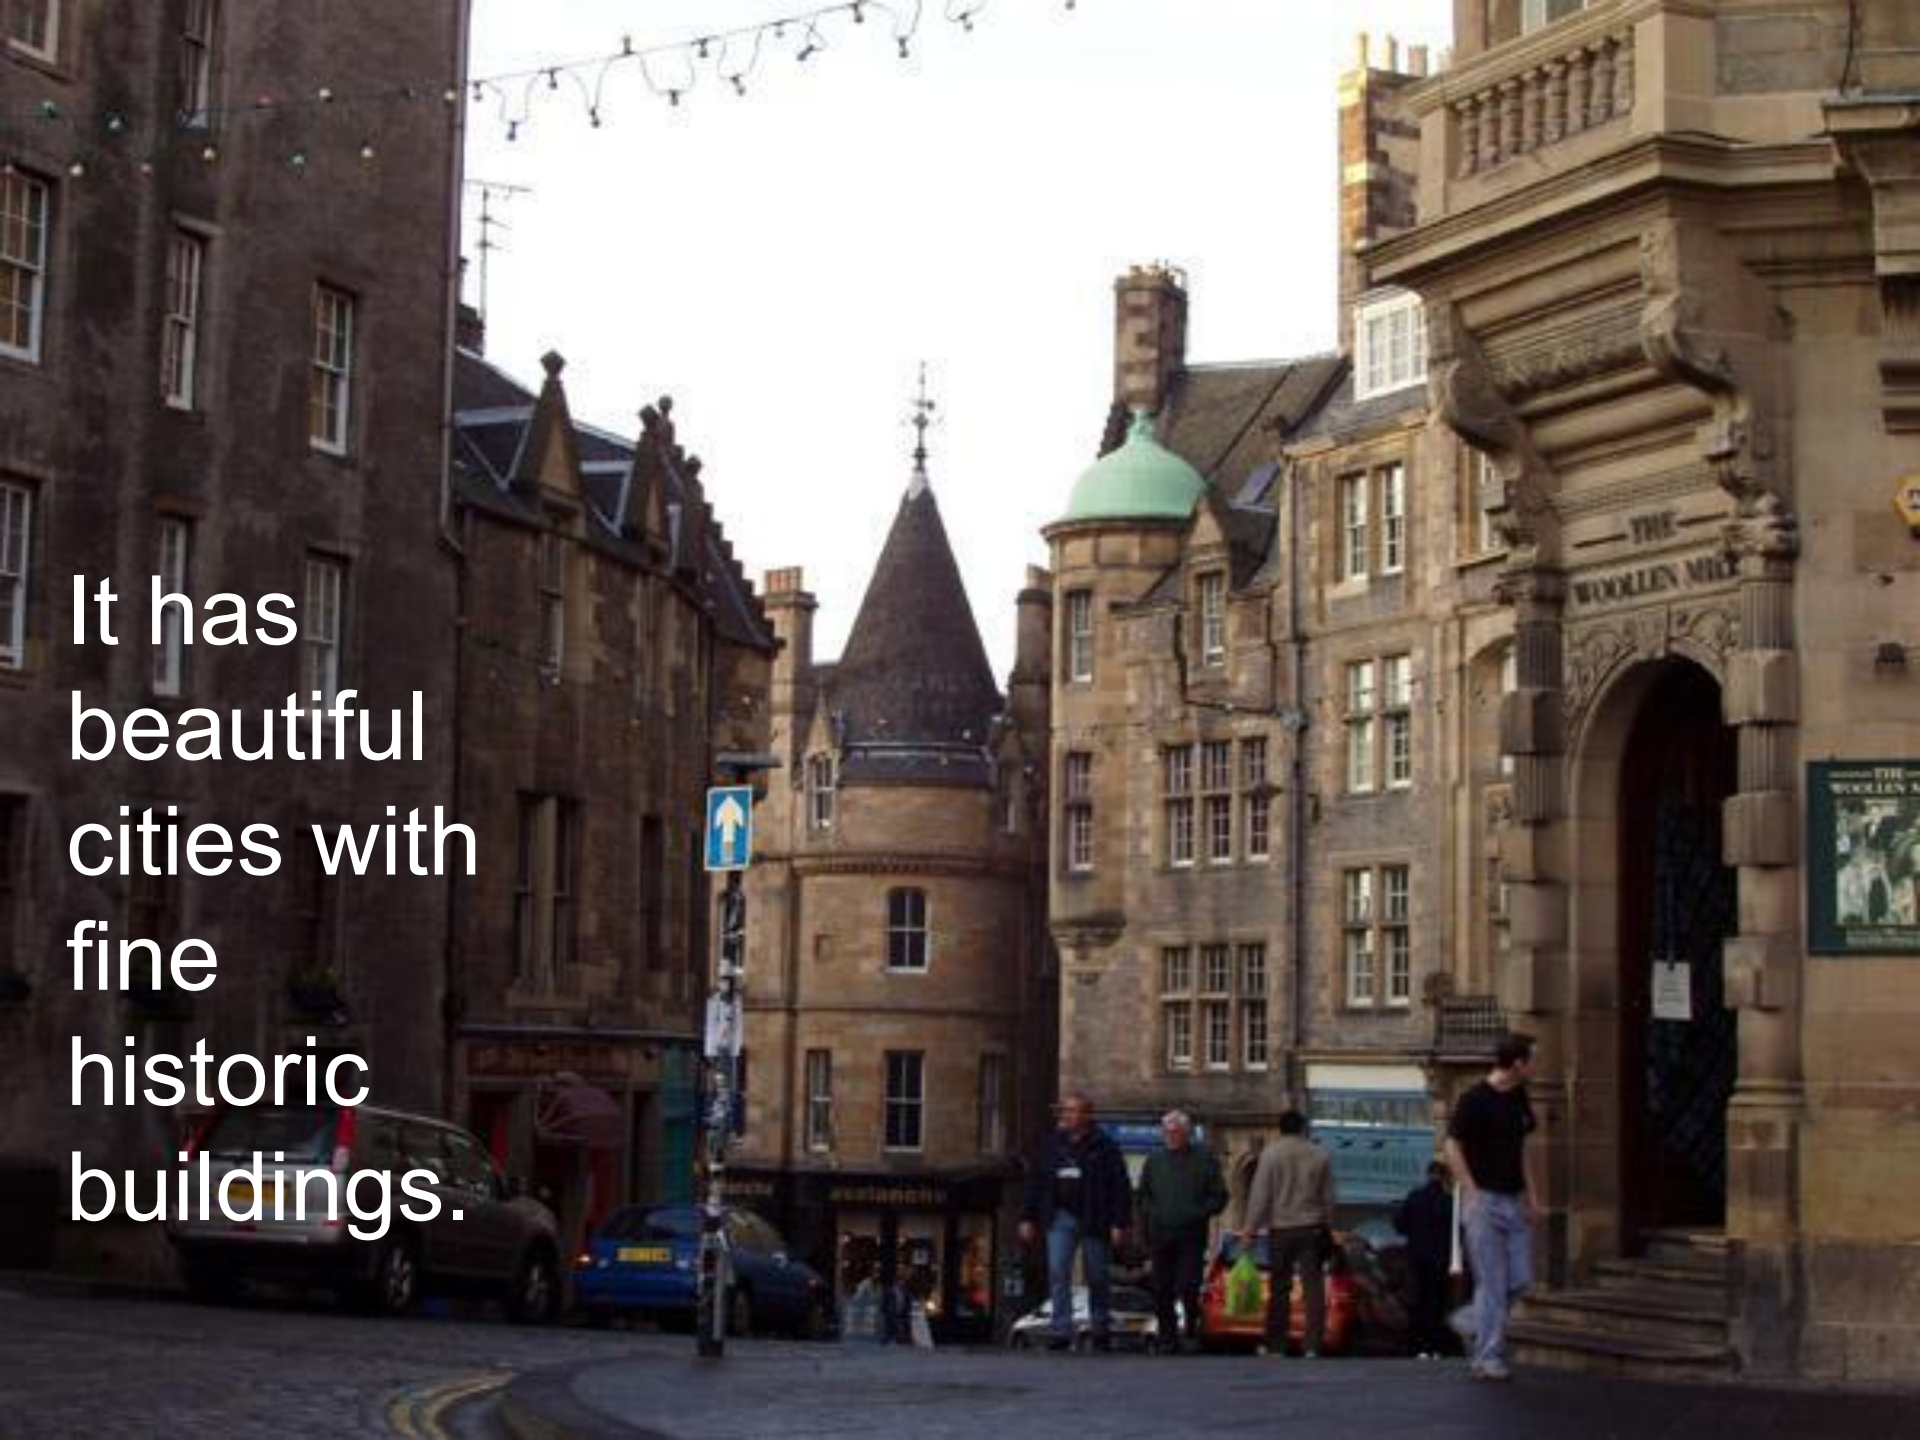

Some scientists think that the Druids used the Stonehenge as a temple, and the stones could serve as a calendar.

A photograph showing a castle or large stone building situated on a hill. The foreground is dominated by the dark, intricate, and bare branches of trees, which partially obscure the view of the castle. The sky is overcast and grey. The overall scene is somewhat somber due to the lack of leaves on the trees.

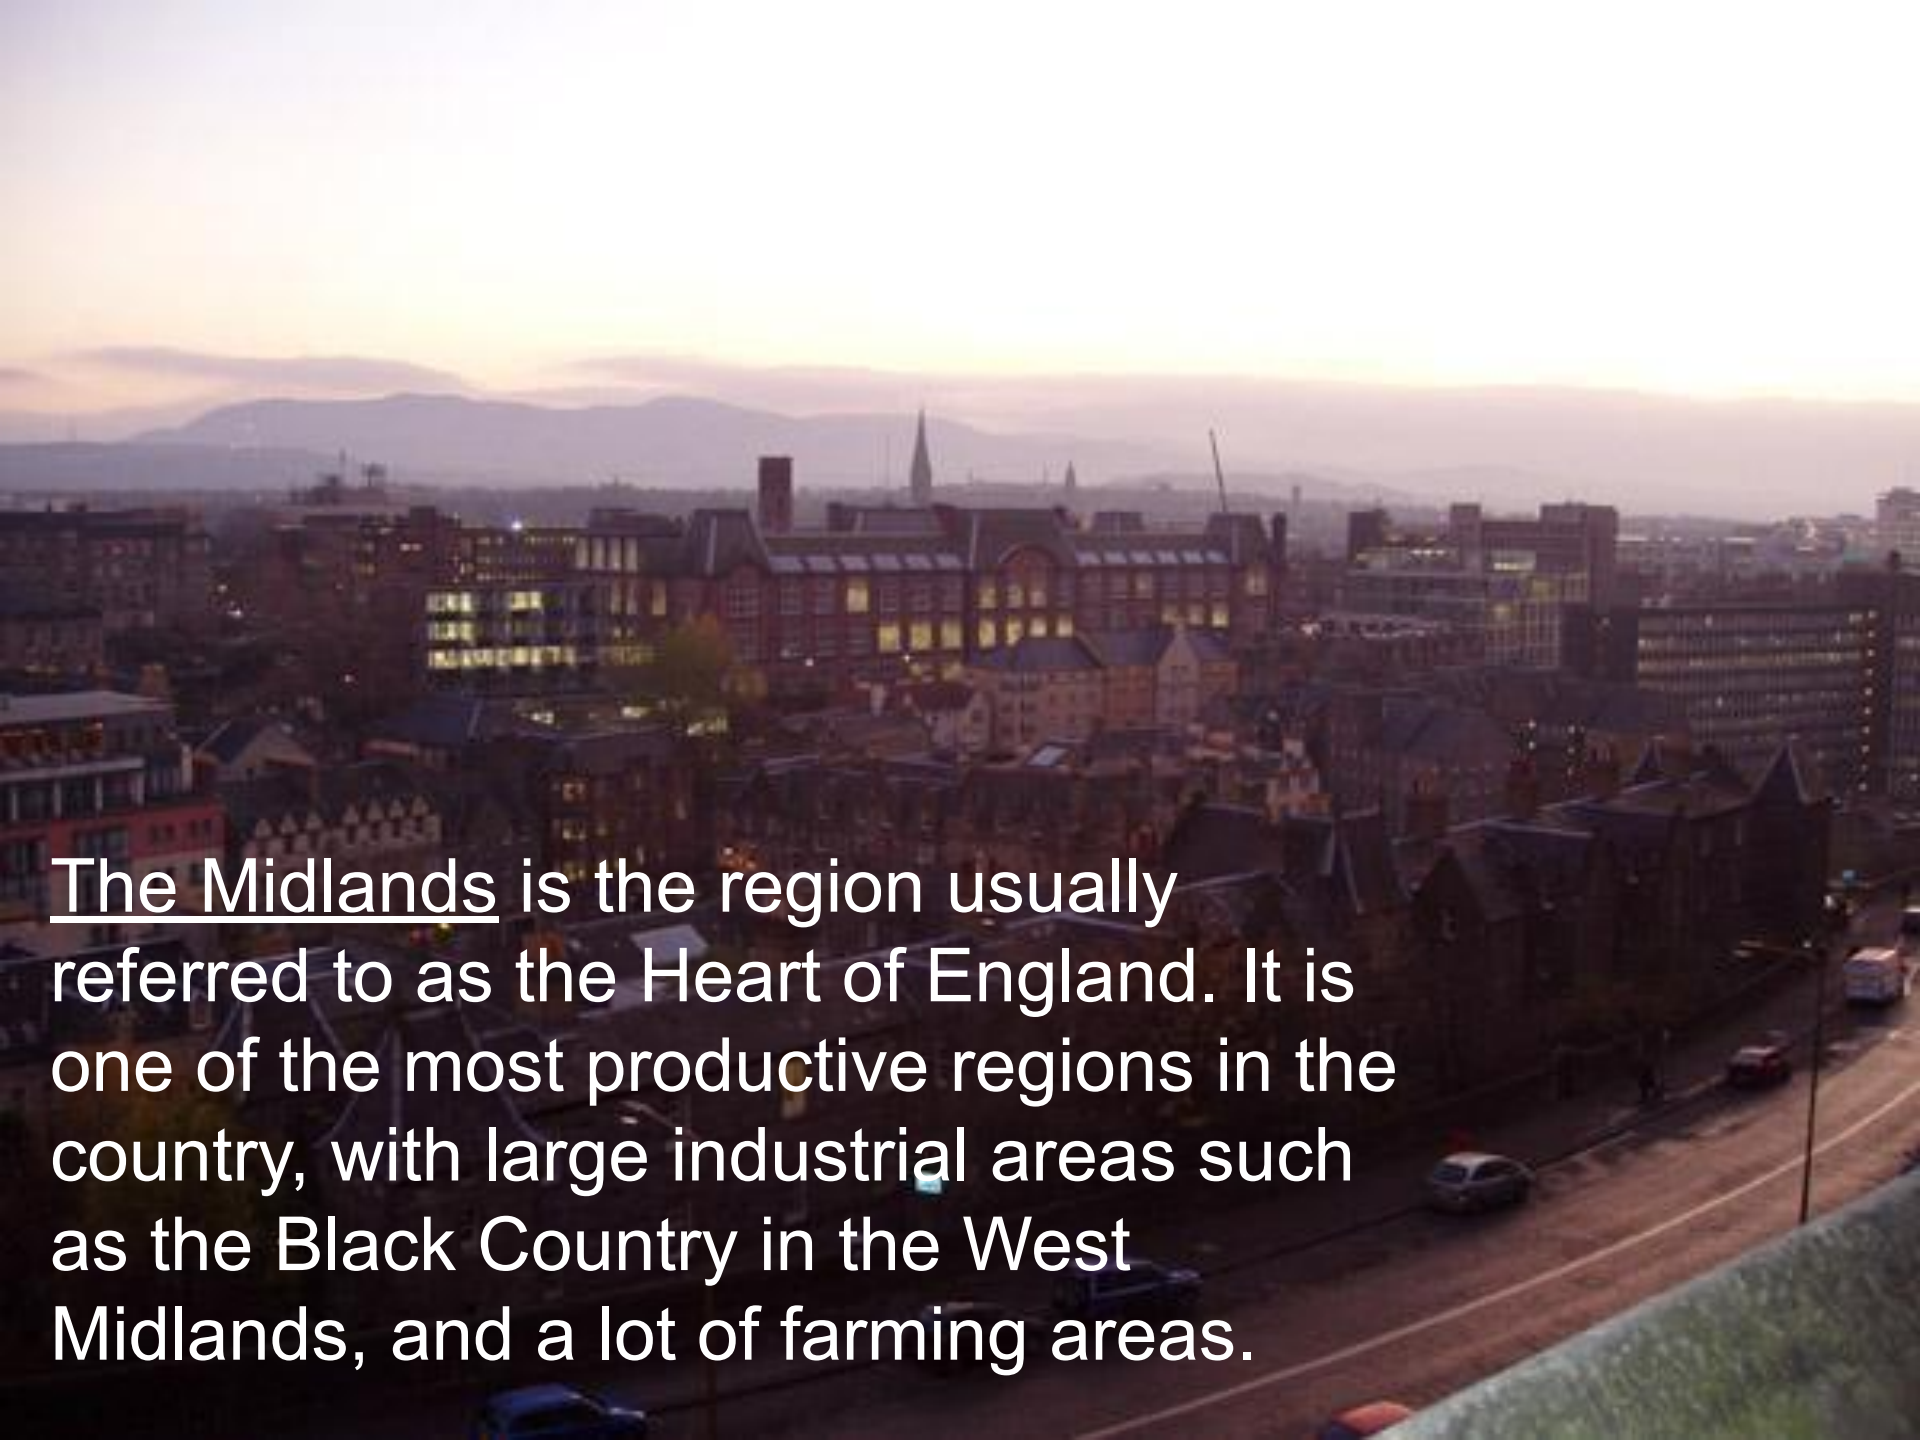

East Anglia is now known as a farming region. Being extremely flat, it is mainly dominated by agriculture.

It has beautiful cities with fine historic buildings.

C A M
B
R
I D
G
E

The Midlands is the region usually referred to as the Heart of England. It is one of the most productive regions in the country, with large industrial areas such as the Black Country in the West Midlands, and a lot of farming areas.

Oxford

Liverpool

Stratford-upon-Avon

The North of England

A scenic landscape of a lake in the North of England, surrounded by mountains and rocky shores. The water is calm and reflects the surrounding green hills and blue sky. The foreground shows rocky banks with some vegetation.

Here you can find deep valleys, rivers and waterfalls, hills and mountains.

The Lake District

