Where and when they lived.

Inca territory covered all the land from the southern regions of present-day Colombia to Argentina and reached a length of 5000 km.

However, in other parts of the world nobody even knew about the existence of their state.

The flourishing civilization of the Incas began in the period 1200 - 1572.

Looked like the Incas.

The Incas were broad-shouldered, small, strong. They had bushy eyebrows, big lips, pointed chin.

Head Viracocha

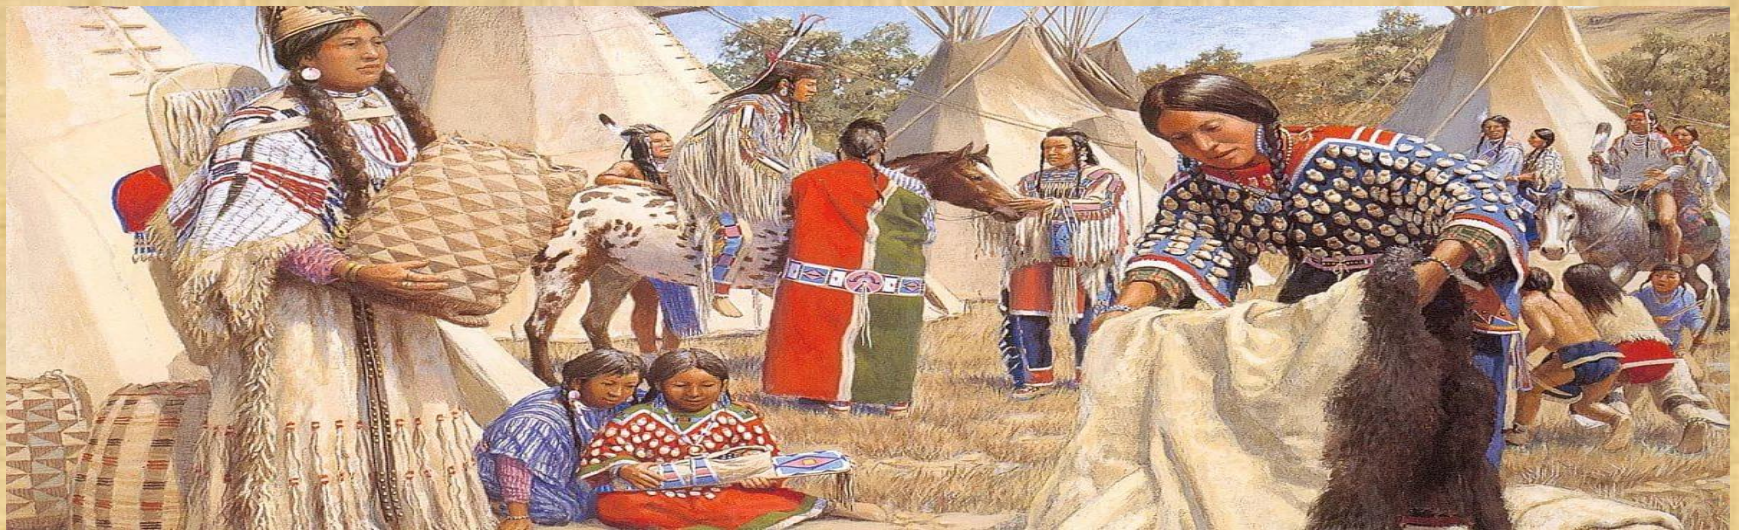

Clothing of the Incas.

Lifestyles of the Incas.

They were engaged in agriculture and livestock. They cultivated the same plants and the same animals as everywhere in Peru. Natural conditions were forced to create irrigation facilities: dams, canals.

They studied medicine and printing.

What can we learn from the Incas?

The Incas Empire had a clear administrative division and well-established economy. Murder and theft were pletelcomy absent.

Not only a well-developed network, but also an extensive system of roads was established in the Incas.
