

PROJECT "EVOLUTION OF YOUTH GROUPS IN RUSSIA"

Беднякова Алеся 11 «Б» класс

Subculture can be called a group of people United by common views on life, different from the worldview that is imposed by the majority. Often they share not only a similar mindset, but also certain musical preferences and style of clothing

Around since the late 80-ies of the 20th century, it became more visible to the attention of researchers to the phenomenon of subculture. In Russia, they were developed around the mid 20th century, when there were such subjects as "hipsters" - the so-called flamboyant youth who tried to dance and to dress "stylish", they got their name. The representatives of this movement very quickly disappeared as the policy against dissidents was very, very hard. It is especially due to the fact that "hipsters" was accused by the state that they bow to the West. This was just to judge, given that the music, which gave preferences "stylish" youth - jazz and rock-n-roll came to us from the USA

The second wave can be called a stage when young people became available rock music (60's-80-ies) .In the middle of this period, when young people got access to narcotic drugs, there was a "system" - the hippy subculture of the USSR, which combines a plurality of individual subcultures, subsequently absorbed even metalheads and punks.

The third wave of development of the subculture in Russia began in 1986, when it was officially recognized the existence of informal groups. It is from this period the youth movement in Russia began to develop actively.

Goths, for example, prefer to wear black clothes, the hair painted black, in addition, lips and nails are also painted in black. Russia is really very often confused with Satanists. The most important feature of any goth can be called the desire to be creative, which can be seen in how they relate to their appearance.
