During this time Tolkien began writing fantasy stories. Part of this writing included making up an entire language called Elvish. The characters called elves in Tolkien's stories speak this language.

Tolkien published The Hobbit in 1937. He wrote it partly to amuse his four children. The main character of the book is a short, furry-footed creature called a hobbit.

The story takes place in a fantasy world called Middle-earth.

The Lord of the Rings,
published in 1954 and 1955,
also takes place in Middle-earth.

This novel is sometimes divided into three parts: The Fellowship of the Ring, The Two Towers, and The Return of the King.

Tolkien died on September 2, 1973. He had started another book about Middle-earth, called The Silmarillion, but did not finish it.

Tolkien's youngest son, Christopher, published this book in 1977.
