

JOY CRISP

Joy A. Crisp is a planetary geologist specializing in Mars geology

Crisp was born in Colorado

- She got a bachelor's degree in geology from Carleton College in 1979
- and both a Master's (1981)
- and a PhD (1984) from Princeton University .

Crisp was a postdoctoral researcher at Los Angeles for more than two years

Crisp has been a researcher at the Jet Propulsion since 1989.

Jet Propulsion Laboratory
California Institute of Technology

Crisp has worked on numerous projects and NASA missions

She is the deputy project scientist for the MSL (aka Curiosity rover) mission.

