Mountains

□ Scotland is well known for its mountainous and beautiful scenery. Grampian mountains attract many tourists all over the world. They are very beautiful with their clean lakes and high hills.

□ Lowlands look very picturesque in all seasons of the year, especially in autumn.

□ Highlands are situated to the North of Edinburgh and Glasgow. These mountains are with few trees, many sheep, wild deer and golden eagles.

Robert Burns

Robert Burns, the greatest Scottish poet, was born in 1759, on 25 January in Alloway, Scotland. That day Scottish people celebrate Burn's night. They wear kilts and play bagpipes. Robert Burns wrote wonderful poems and songs. His most famous poem is "My Heart's in the Highlands".

Highlands and Islands

To the north of Edinburgh and Glasgow are the Highlands of Scotland: mountains with few trees, wild deer and many sheep. It's one of the most picturesque places in the world.

The Highlanders, the people of the area – are very devoted to their country with its striking beauty, though it is not so prosperous as other places in Britain. Most of these people are farmers and fishermen. Scotland does a lot of fish trading. On the small islands to the north and west of Scotland there are fishing and farming villages. The houses in the villages look modest but they have to be strong enough to keep people warm in winter when cold winds blow from the sea. Some of the people still speak Gaelic, the ancient Celtic language of Scotland.
