Linkin Park

Linkin Park — American alternative rock band. Founded in 1996 year under the name Xero. Having been around since 2000 under the name Linkin Park, the group has twice received the award "Grammy". The group found success with their debut album in 2000 called Hybrid Theory, sold in 27 million copies (in 2010 he gained "diamond" status, awarded RIAA). Next Studio album, Meteora, repeated, though not surpassed the success of the previous, leading in 2003 on the Billboard 200. In total, the album sold a total circulation of approximately 73 million copies.

History. Formation

● The group was founded in 1996 by two classmates Mike Shinoda and Brad Deltona (which are now in the group). It was originally called SuperXero. They later changed their name to Xero. In its composition were Mike, Brad, Joe, Dave, Rob and Mark. Despite limited resources, the guys started recording a few songs in Shinoda's bedroom, which became the first Studio of the group. After many rejections from record labels contract with the group, tension and resentment in her grew. Realizing that this group will not be the future, Mark left the band in search of other projects. Dave Farrell also had to leave them, as his other project tour. Xero has spent considerable time in the search for a replacement vocal Mark, while the boys didn't know one singer living in Arizona Chester Bennington. Through a friend, Jeff Blue, the Vice President of Zomba Music, the musicians called the Bennington and asked to send them my vocals on a demo tape. Bennington, breaking away from the celebration of his birthday, he recorded a demo tape and gave it to listen to the guys on the phone. His unique voice has made the band a huge impression. The next day, Chester flew to Los Angeles. After Chester agreed to join the group, it was called Hybrid Theory. The idea of mixing styles of vocals gave the impetus for the creation of new material that helped revive the group. Came a time of change. U guys have any problems with the British electronic group, which was the name of the Hybrid and accused them of plagiarism, so Chester Bennington came up with a new name for the group — Lincoln Park, because he constantly went to the Studio through the Park in Santa Monica. But the domain lincolnpark.com 've been busy. In English the name is pronounced as Linkin Lincoln, and a group called Linkin Park, receiving domain linkinpark.com.
