Biography

- Millet was born in Southampton and began to study painting at the age of nine. In 1838, when it became apparent to his ability, the family moved to London. At age 11, Millet entered the Royal Academy of Arts, becoming the youngest student in the history of the Academy. In 1846, appeared before the public with the historical pattern of "Pizarro took prisoner the Inca of Peru," which critics have recognized the best in the entire academic exhibition of the year and the following year won the gold medal for his film "Attack of the tribe of Benjamin to the daughters of Siloam." In 1848, one of the shows Millais Holman Hunt met with Dante Gabriel Rossetti, and with them founded the Pre-Raphaelite Brotherhood.

He became a portrait painter, landscape painter in part and became the first English artist to receive the baronetcy (in 1885). In 1896 he was elected president of the Royal Academy. The portraits Millais depicts, as a rule, the people known in high public office. Currently, Millet is one of the most popular British artists of the mid-XIX century.

«Isabella, or the Pot of Basil, 1818.»

- Vassal of love - Lorenzo Young,
Beautiful, ingenuous Isabel!
Perhaps Mademoiselle,
that under the roof of one
Love their hearts not captured;
Perhaps Mademoiselle,
so a meal a day
Their views are not met
now and then;
To make them middle of the night in silence
Each other not dreamed in a dream.
