What are they?

a part of the National Park System, an organization that was set up in 1916 to protect areas of great natural beauty or of historic interest so that everyone can enjoy them.

What are they for?

aims of national parks

- ❖ to protect the countryside;
- ❖ to allow people to enjoy the countryside as home to trees, flowers, animals and birds.

National parks in America

America was the first country in starting up “National Parks”, beginning with Yellowstone in 1872. By now this and a dozen other parks together cover a small fragment of the whole area of western mountings.

The most famous American National parks are:

- Yellowstone
- The Great Smoky Mountains
- The Everglades
- The Great Canyon

National parks in Great Britain

The first national park in England and Wales was founded in 1949. Long before this time, William Wordsworth, the great English poet, suggested that his native Lake District should become a special place. Now there are ten national parks in England and Wales which cover 9% of the land area. 90 million visitors come to national parks every year.

Everglades

- The Everglades, Florida is one of the most interesting places. The Everglades is protected as a national park. Its unique ecology – home to water birds, snakes, alligators, wildcats, fish, cypress trees – is enjoyed by naturalists and tourists.

Lake District

The largest national park in the northwest of England. It is popular with walkers, cyclists, and people who go boating. It is one of the most beautiful and attractive places. It has Windermere, the longest lake in England, and Scafell, the highest mountain in England. Was unknown until the end of the 18th century. Then the works of such writers as Wordsworth and Coleridge attracted visitors to the lakes. Now the Lake District is one of the most popular tourist places in Britain. It is a place where you can enjoy fishing in the rivers and lakes or boating on the quiet waters of Lakeland.
