AUTOMATIC ELECTRO-PHOTOGRAPHY.

"SALLIE GARDNER," owned by LELAND STANFORD; running at a 140 gait over the Palo Alto track, 10th June, 1878.

The negatives of these photographs were made at intervals of twenty-seven inches of distance, and about the twenty-fifth part of a second of time; they illustrate successive positions assumed in each twenty-seven inches of progress during a single stride of the team. The vertical lines were twenty-seven inches apart; the horizontal lines represent elevations of four inches each. The exposure of each negative was less than the two-thirtieth part of a second.

1890: First National Geographic photograph of North America

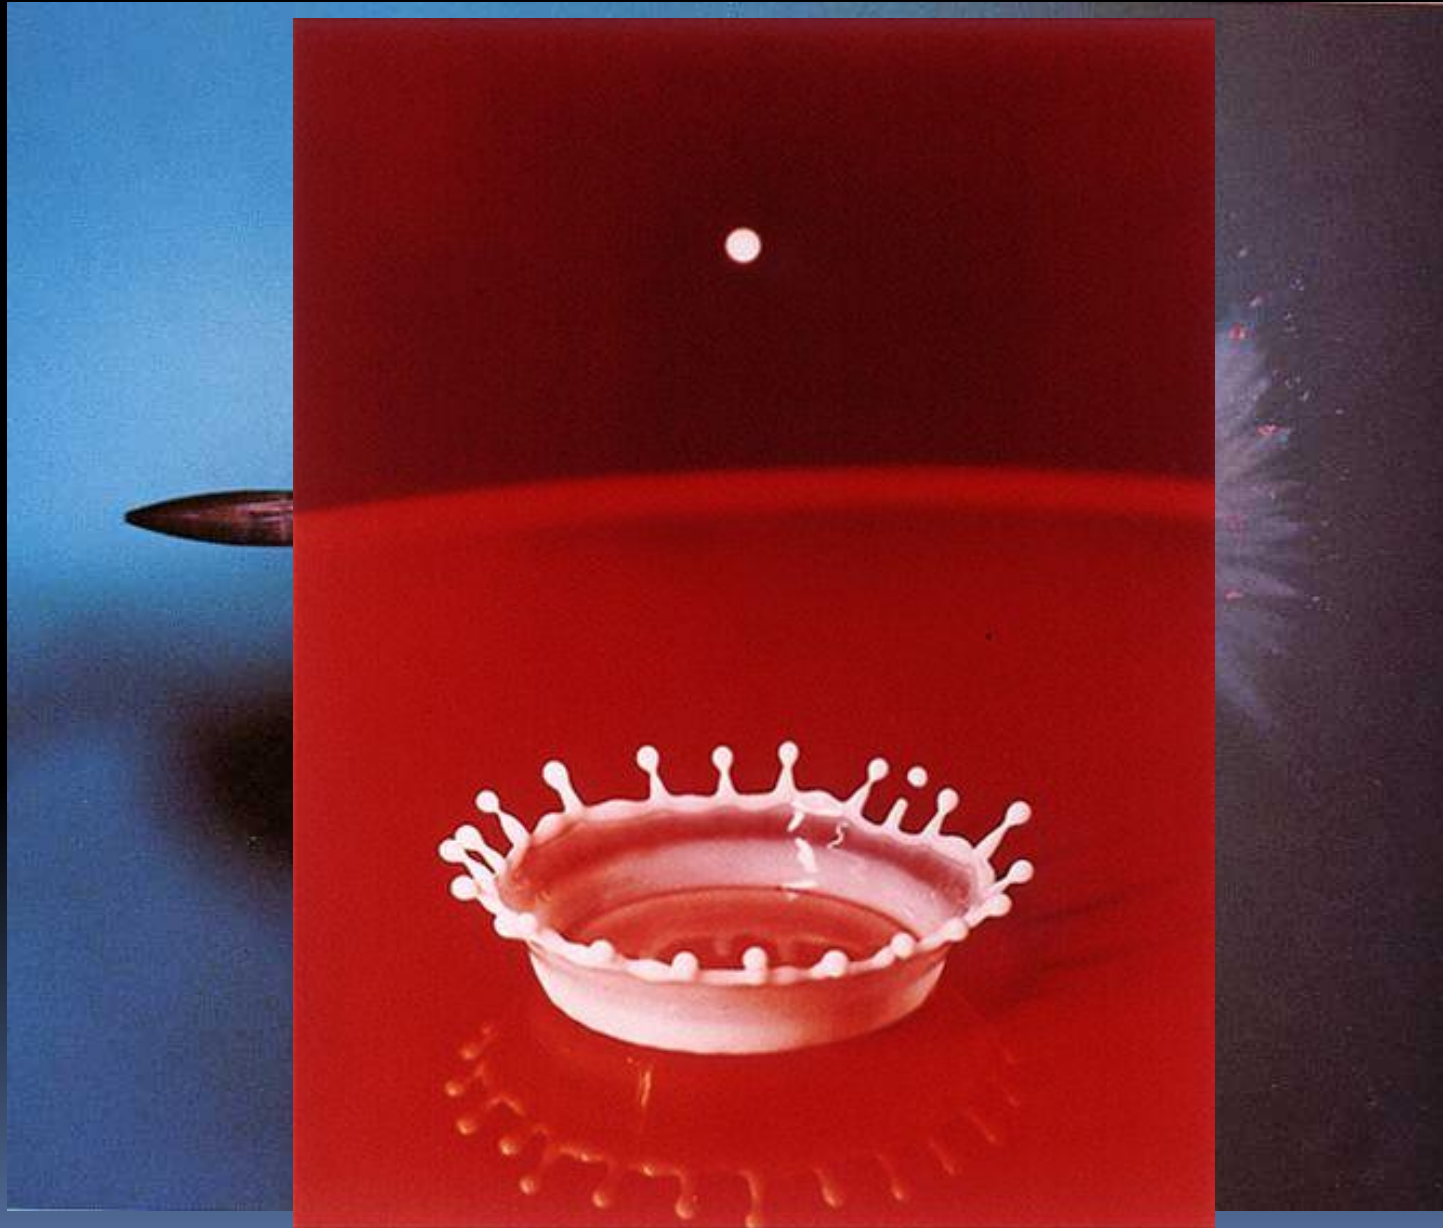

1893: The first underwater photograph by Louis Boutan

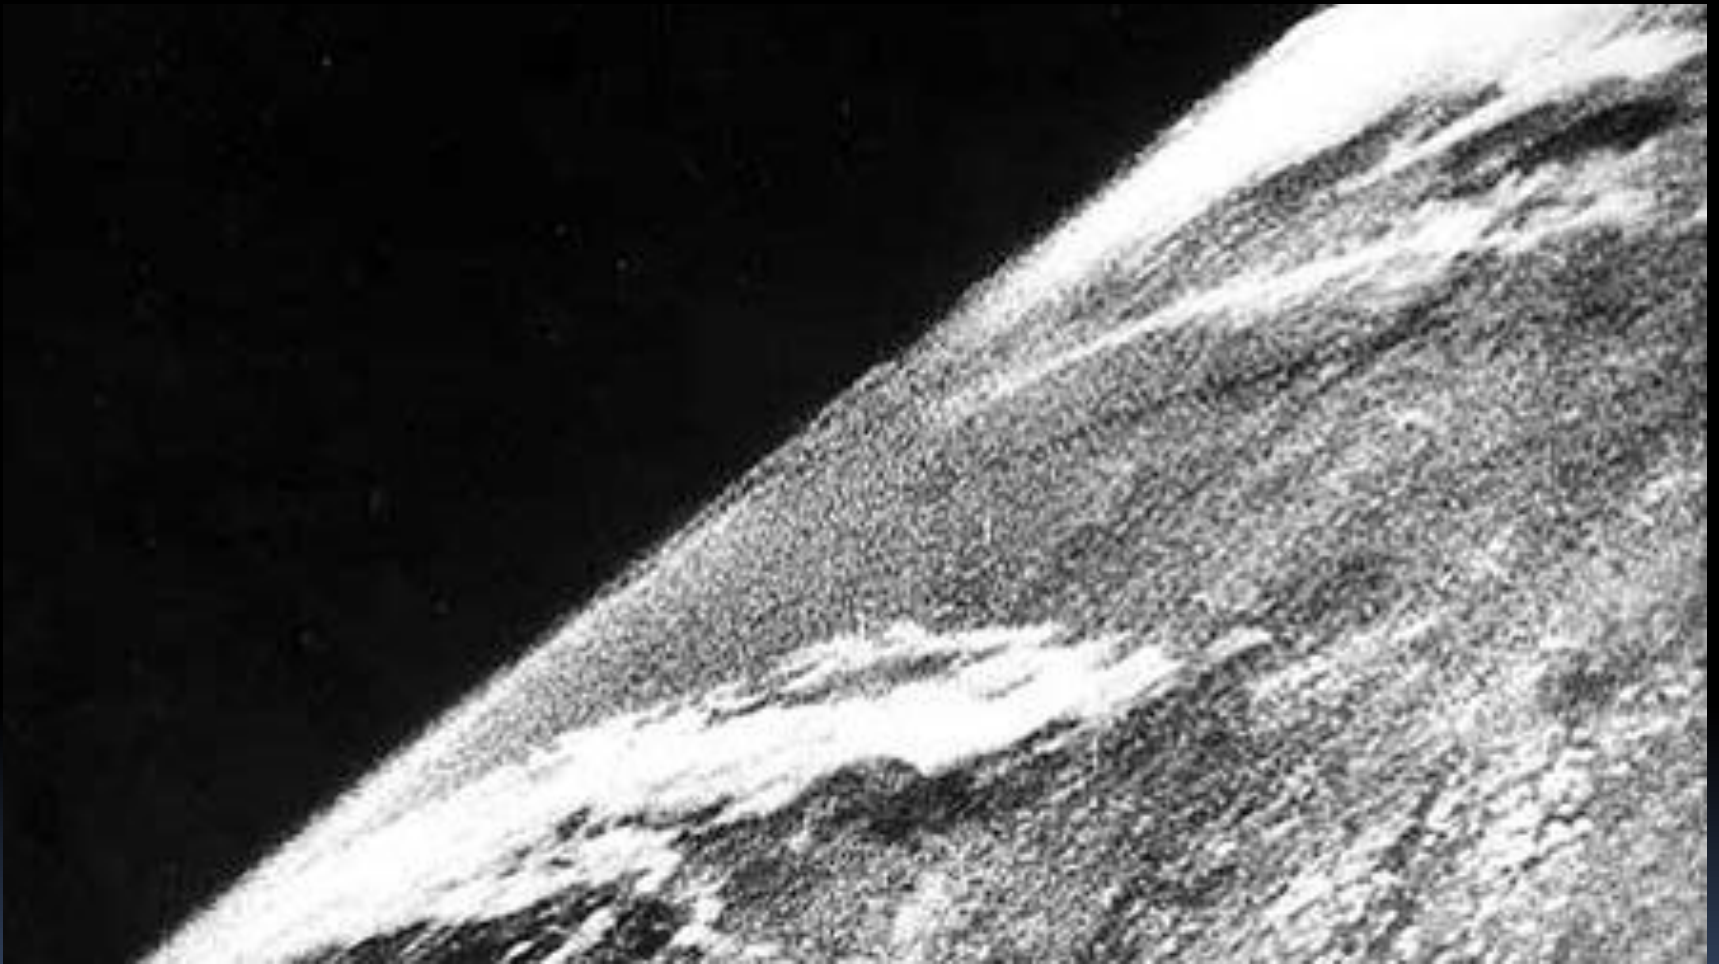

1926: First underwater colour photo

So that's the
our society
Docume

ffected

Consider these points.....

- Is our nation becoming Desensitised by the news?
- Are we too interested in other peoples devastation?
- Would we want people to take photos/footage of our final moments?
- Would you photograph or record these significant events if you were in that situation?

Watch this compilation of amateur and news footage from the September 11th terrorist attacks.

Think about these discussion points.....

- Do you feel uncomfortable watching the footage?
- Do you think that we need to know about these events around the world?
- If you had a camera in your hand and were in New York on that day, what battles would you have to overcome if any?
- What is your opinion of this event?
- What would your opinion of this event be without any visual evidence of it?
- Should money be exchanged for these images?
- Where can you see documentary reportage in 5-10 years time?
