*International
Day of the Girl*

International Day of the Girl aims to recognize girls' rights and the unique challenges that they face around the world.

Gender inequality is so prevalent in the world that the United Nations introduced a Gender Inequality Index (GII) to measure gender disparity in countries.

After a successful campaign led by Plan International Canada, the United Nations has declared an International Day of the Girl Child, to be celebrated annually on October 11

According to the Cyber-bullying Research Center at Florida Atlantic University, teenage girls are much more likely to engage in cyberbullying than boys. Their preferred method of attack? Spreading nasty rumors .

According to studies, girls have more sensitive hearing than boys right from birth, and the gap gets greater with age. Girls' hearing is more sensitive to speech patterns, making it easier for them to hear what you're saying ... and their verbal processing develops earlier so they understand better, too.

Research that shows girls are better at recognizing tastes than boys. Even though girls have the same number of taste buds as boys, the girls process taste impressions differently. Sugar? Spice? They've got it down (and yeah, girls have better taste in clothes, too).

Girls are four times more likely than boys to fear spiders in all of their creepy crawly glory. Researchers found that girls are genetically predisposed to develop fear for potentially dangerous insects . Baby girls start to associate pictures of spiders with fear at only 11 months old while boys remain indifferent. Fascinating.

Girls are biologically wired to shed tears more than boys . The male tear duct is larger than the female's, so if a girl and a boy both tear up, the girl's tears will flow down her cheeks quicker. It's not all about sensitivity ... it's about science!

Girls are naturally chatty. While both boy and girl babies say their first word around their first birthday, girls usually have more words at 16 months than toddler boys do. Girls are also first to hit the 300-word vocabulary mark.
