Winter

Russia is the largest country in the world.

The are steppes in the south,...

... plains and forests
in the midland,...

... the tundra and the taiga in the north,...

... the highlands and mountains in the east.

Russia has a lot of rivers and lakes.

A photograph of a rocky landscape. In the foreground, there are several green, leafy plants growing on the ground. The background is filled with various types of rocks, including large, light-colored (tan and white) rocks and smaller, darker (grey and reddish) rocks. The text is overlaid on the image in a large, white, sans-serif font.

Russia is an industrial country. It has a lot of mineral resources: coal, natural gas and iron. There are a lot of large factories and plants all over the country.

A close-up photograph of a variety of fresh vegetables. In the foreground, there are several bright orange carrots, some whole and some sliced. Interspersed among them are several ripe red tomatoes, some whole and some cut. There are also several heads of green broccoli, some yellow and orange bell peppers, and a few white cauliflower florets. In the background, a large head of purple cabbage is visible, along with a whole yellow onion and a yellow bell pepper. The overall scene is a colorful and healthy display of produce.

Russia is also an agricultural country. The Russians plant corn, fruits and vegetables.

A scenic view of the Moscow skyline, featuring the Kremlin's towers and golden-domed churches reflected in a river. The text is overlaid on the image.

Russia is a great country full of interesting places
and wonderful nature.
