Motherland...This word we pronounce proudly and we write it in Russian with the capital letter. If we ask our friends and relatives what Motherland means for them, we'll hear different answers. Some of them say that Motherland is your birthplace, others say it is your home where you began to walk and say your first word. The third ones say Motherland begins with your nearest and dearest – Mother, father, sisters, brothers, relatives and friends. For most people Motherland is their home, the land of their fathers. Whatever and whenever it is, it is always dear to us. I think Motherland is my ancestors.

MY FAMILY TREE

The Echo from the Past.

The area of the Volga river... Steps... How beautiful the spacious steps are! How nice they are in spring!

I imagine my grandfather and his sister being small children running and picking bright red, yellow, white and even brown tulips in steps.

My courageous, hardworking and merry ancestors lived in these steps.

Kobzev Nickolay Semeonovich, my great – great grandfather Leonty Stepanovich's cousin said: «Landlord Romanov gave six serffamilies (among them my great – great – great – great – great grandfather Gerasim Donshin's family) to his friend landlord Salov for a hound. Landlord Salov took these families out in a village which later was called Salovka, after the Great October revolution village Salovka was renamed into Voskresenka (Saratov region) ».

Gerasim Donshin, my great – great – great – great – great grandfather, then his son Ermolay, my great – great – great – great grandfather, and then his grandson Stepan (1847) my great – great – great grandfather and their families lived in Salovka. They were poor but very friendly. They could work hard and had a good time. They liked to sing folk songs and got well with each other.

The main tradition of my family has remained to get together at different holidays and to value family relations. All of my relatives wherever they live always contact with each other, help each other in difficult situations. I like when all my relatives get together on different occasions, both happy and sad, and I am proud of my large family and I am sure they will always support me when I am in need because we are devoted to each other. A tree wouldn't grow beautiful and strong if it didn't have mighty roots. Neither would a man. A man will not be worthy son of his Fatherland if he doesn't know his family.
