Vocabulary

- It consists of three parts:
- the Royal Apartments (gold),
- the House of Lords (red) and
- the House of Commons (green).

We are now in the Chamber of the House of Lords, where the seats are red.

The House of Lords

- It is also called the Parliament Chamber, because every year when the Queen comes to open Parliament, all three parts of Parliament come together here for the Queen's Speech.

In fact, it's not really the Queen's Speech, because she doesn't write it. The Government writes it for her. In the speech the Queen tells Parliament about the Government's plans for the next year.

The Throne.

- When the Queen gives her speech, she sits on the throne. It is behind the big red cushion.

The Woolsack.

- It is the big red cushion. There is wool inside it. It's a part of a very old tradition which started in the 14th century. It symbolized the importance of wool to the British economy at that time.

The person who usually sits on the Woolsack is the Lord Chancellor. He presides over the House of Lords.

In the House of Commons.

- The distance between these two red lines is two swords' lengths. In the old days when MPs used to carry swords, it was dangerous if they got angry with each other. So these two lines are here to remind MPs that they shouldn't start a fight, and they can't go over this line when they are speaking in a debate.

The Mace.

- The Mace is put on the table when the House of Commons is sitting. It is the symbol of the power which Parliament won from the King a long time ago.

In the House of Commons

- There are two long narrow corridors here. MPs come here to vote on bills for new laws. On the left there is the «yes» lobby. MPs who agree with a bill go there. On the right there is the «no» lobby.

The Westminster Hall

- This is the oldest part of the Palace of Westminster. The walls were built in 1097.
