Handwritten cursive practice on a horizontal line. This row is identical to the first row, featuring six pairs of connected loops alternating in orientation.

Handwritten practice on a horizontal line. It begins with three vertical parallel lines, followed by a series of connected vertical strokes with small dots at their base, resembling a rhythmic pattern or a specific cursive flourish.
