

A painting of a winter landscape. In the foreground, a river flows through a snowy field. The snow is depicted with light blue and white brushstrokes, suggesting a cold, bright day. Several trees are scattered throughout the scene. Some are tall and thin, with dark trunks and sparse green needles, likely evergreens. Others are smaller and have bare, brown branches, indicating they are deciduous trees without their leaves. The background shows a dense line of trees under a pale, overcast sky. The overall style is impressionistic, with visible brushwork and a focus on light and color.
