Economic history

- In the 18th century the UK was the first country to industrialise
- during the 19th century had a dominant role in the global economy
- From the late-19th century the Second Industrial Revolution in the United States and Germany challenged the economic position of the UK
- the First World War and Second World War contributed to the weakening

Economic history

- After the Second World War, the UK enjoyed a long period without a major recession (from 1945 to 1973) and a rapid growth in prosperity in the 1950s and 1960s
- following the 1973 oil crisis and the 1973–1974 stock market crash, the British economy fell into recession
- A period of neo-liberal economics began in 1979 with the election of Margaret Thatcher as the Prime Minister
 - During the 1980s most state-owned enterprises were privatised, taxes cut, trade union reforms passed and markets deregulated. GDP initially fell but a growth followed (to reach its peak in 1988)
 - Thatcher's battle against inflation resulted in a major increase in unemployment from 1.5 million in 1979 to over 3 million in 1982, and 3.3 million in 1984.

Economic history

- the British economy experienced another recession in late 1990, the subsequent economic recovery was extremely strong (with a fall in unemployment)
- During Tony Blair's 10 years in office the UK experienced economic growth, lasting until the second quarter of 2008
- This period of growth ended in 2008 when the United Kingdom entered a recession caused by the global financial crisis
- In 2013 the UK's economy has grown by 0,8%, which means it experiences a slow recovery
