The TRAGICAL BALLAD: Or, The LADY who fell in Love with her SERVING-MAN.

PART I.
GOOD people pray attend
 Unto these lines I've penn'd,
 Which to the world I fend,
 Therefore draw near,
 And hear what I do say,
 Alack-and-a-well-a-day,
 Unto love's sad decay,
 Pro'd I most severe.

There was a servant-man,
 Who lives near the Strand,
 As I do understand,
 He was so fair,
 So this young lady bright
 Could not rest day or night,
 He was her soul's delight,
 She lov'd him dear.

Now this young lady cry'd,
 I can't be fatisfy'd,
 I wish I was his bride,
 To cure my smart.
 Young Cupid bend the bow,
 And wound my lover so,
 That in short time he'll know
 A love-sick heart.

Why should I thus complain?
 He knoweth not my pain,
 He being my serving-man,
 And I so great.
 Could I unfold my mind,
 Great comfort should I find,
 But fortune proves unkind,
 Oh! cruel fate.

Why was I born so high,
 To live in misery?
 Or Cupid's dart to fly
 Into my breast?

I wish I was as poor,
 Thy love would me adore;
 Then should I evermore
 Enjoy my care.

Then the young lady said,
 Why should I be afraid?
 I'll bring my servant maid
 To tell my mind.
 Betty, Betty, said she,
 Pray come you here to me!
 You must my counsel be,
 Then I'll prove kind.

I love our servant-man,
 You know our honest John,
 Let me do what I can,
 I can't be free.
 Love has enflam'd my heart,
 As I do feel the smart,
 Cupid with his keen dart
 Has wounded me.

Then said the damsel fair,
 Madam, face your declare
 Your mind, I can't forbear,
 But let you know
 I am in the same case,
 I love his charming face,
 My heart within his breast
 Is pleas'd to be.

In sorrow, discontent,
 Away this damsel went,
 Her heart with mischief bent,
 As you shall find.
 Tho' she's my lady fair,
 Her secret I'll declare;
 Or I shall lose my dear,
 In a short time.

PART II.
GOOD people lend an ear,
 I'm sure you'll shed a tear,
 When you this story hear,
 The second part.

How Cupid bent his bow,
 Wounding three lovers so,
 Great troubles they did know,
 By his keen dart.
 The damsel first began,
 And said, I am undone;
 I shall distract run,
 I am afraid.

Could I draw back my mind,
 From love to be inclin'd,
 Great comfort should I find,
 In grief the said.
 We leave the damsel here,
 Entangled in love's snare,
 To treat of the young fair
 Lady to bright.

As the fat fighting then,
 Came in the servant-man,
 As we do understand,
 That very night.
 She did unfold her mind,
 Within short time we find,
 Saying to him most kind,
 You have my heart.

The young man stood amaz'd,
 And on his lady gaz'd,
 Sure these are happy days,
 The young man said,
 Draw madam, do forbear,
 Draw me not in a snare,
 If my master should hear,
 We are ruin'd!

Rather than that should be,
 I'd go along with thee,
 Either by land or sea,
 Or where you please.
 You are my heart's delight,
 I can travel far and night,
 So thy consent I pray
 To cross the sea.

Then said the lady bright,
 To-morrow, when 'tis light,
 I'll marry my delight,
 Then straightway I will go
 Along with thee, my dear,
 And man's apparel wear:
 No one can us ensnare,
 Nor can us know.

PART III.
OBSERVE this part the third,
 The servant-maid she flood,
 And heard them every word,
 Then frait she run.
 Master, master, said she,
 Alas! you'll ruin'd be!
 Ye-- daughter doth agree
 To marry John.

To-morrow is the day,
 He call'd his daughter fair,
 Madam, what are you there?
 Her father cry'd.
 Pray call John here also,
 The truth I mean to show,
 And if I find it so,
 I will provide.

A place you need not fear,
 Both for you and your dear;
 And I will prove severe
 Unto you both.
 Father, your will be done,
 He's like to be your fon,
 Or else I will have none,
 Upon my troth.

Daughter, since you say so,
 He shall to prison go;
 And I'll confine also
 You to your room.
 Father, father, forbear;
 Do not punish my dear;
 Let me the burden bear;
 Or I'm undone.

She to her chamber's sent,
 And he to prison went,
 In grief and discontent,
 Here to remain.
 He sent him over to sea,
 A soldier there to be,
 To fight in Spain.

Now, said the servant-maid,
 Alas! it was a betray'd
 You love and mine, she said,
 What have I done?
 With that the tore her hair,
 And fell into despair,
 And as I do declare,
 To Beilam's gone!

That very self-same night
 This youthful lady bright
 In dark and doleful night
 Got clear away.
 Out of a window high,
 She got her liberty;
 Travelling the did come night
 Unto the sea.

And in short time we hear
 She cross'd the ocean fair,
 In man's apparel there
 She met her dear:
 A soldier was he also,
 Yet his love did not know,
 She being his comrade too,
 As we do hear.

In Spain they were not long,
 Before they both were drawn
 Into a party strong,
 To fight their foe.
 The first that wounded were,
 Was this young lady fair,
 Dying the did declare
 Her grief and woe.

As she was on the ground,
 He suck'd her blood wound,
 Crying, My dear is gone,
 With her sweet charms:
 Shall I live longer too?
 No, no, that ne'er will do,
 Piercing his body thro',
 Dy'd in her arms.

Now came this news, we hear,
 Unto her father dear;
 He stamp'd and tore his hair,
 Grieving he said,
 Alas! my daughter dear,
 I prov'd I thus the severe,
 Now thou art dead I fear,
 So I'll end my days.

Printed and Sold at the Printing-Office in Bow-Church-Yard, London.

An Epitaph / of Master Francis Beulson / Citizen and Merchant of London, and of the Ha- burdshyers Company.

Therefore ye living prepare.

For the living to see.

Just quiet and ready with his pen, and counting to himself:
 Of right and loyal to the night, to serve else enterprise:
 As well for friends, as for himself, when honor the same did raise:
 Whether it were in Merchants trade, or other matters grave
 Before his name might long, the French and Dutch he speak:
 With pen and speche in pleasant and burlesque words made
 And for his time his name had borne, as people I am told:
 He was Merchant of Bow Church, he liv'd here by Burdshyers.
 The Spanes revenues of last creation, he thereby did enlarge:
 With great payment of all youth committed to his charge,
 Beneficial else he was, to each folk and boy:
 He traded to the Sea and land, it could none other be:
 These parts he with good name and fame, to each mans contentation:
 That such him dealt in any Trade, as his great contentation:
 And though he was had poorer done, he was credit large:
 For each contract in trafficke here, might well be his charge:
 And his courageous attempts, by force to do for France:
 That never men did suffer there, as some imagine the same:
 Which to him knowne, full with his content temper nature for:
 That he unmov'd stood not, but let all nature go:
 And leave to G O D the whole revenge, still taking quietness:
 So he affares they framed well, and better had success:
 To take the fever with the flame, him selfe he did prepare:
 With any less he did feare, that pass'd his conquest care:
 Other life in every part, but life he had before:
 With cheerful sadnes, right curious to all men:
 And before his death, he knew place, time and when:
 So noble and so virtuous, here knowne to be none as well,
 As unto the world for fame, thus will repose can tell:
 And also knowne in Prince Court, by his father's name:
 So well to cause of his own, as others of his nation:
 For left behind he was by good, all men he lov'd:
 His life in every part, but life he had before:
 And where he was a Merchant, for through his science:
 He charitably to them, gave his benevolence:
 His will long time say he had made, which he from years to grave:
 By spirit and ether so, as death were ever near:
 He was to charity, but not to spite, all hope it did bereave:
 So long there was death to escape, which he perceived well:
 Straight thereupon he did command, his goods of great value:
 To be given, to his charitable goods, according to his will:
 And gave himselfe to the grave, with charity to his spirit:
 His death was to be as he liv'd, and to be made an end:
 Which he felt in his heart, as in his, with Alas! and the rest:
 Of good and virtuous, that for the sake of God are dead:
 His good example, to others, great God we thus require:
 And that he may them imitate, we humbly thus require:
 Which I conclude, being to G O D, all honour, fame and praise:
 And thanks for this our brother bears, I wish to walk his way.

Music is a higher revelation than all wisdom and philosophy. Music is the electrical soil in which the spirit lives, thinks and invents.
