

Theodore Dreiser AMERICAN AUTHOR

BORN August 27, 1871 Terre Haute, Indiana DIED December 28, 1945 (aged 74) Los Angeles, California

Sister Carrie

Jennie Gerhardt (1911)

SISTER CARRIE THEODORE DREISER

JENNIE GERHARDT By THEODORE DREISER

9" Jennie Gerhardt" is the life story of a woman who craved affection. Unselfish, sweet," treating, she is the daugister of poor working people in a Western city. She attracts the attention of one who sits in the seats of the mighty and he plans education and marriage with this girl hungry for love and grateful for recognition. But there comes a tragedy which leaves dennie to face the world alone, with a dominant instinct for sympathy and love, something of which she accepts at last.

Mr. Dreiser's novel shows a woman's heart in the midst of a broad picture of modern life which is full of contrasts and of vivid characters—the life of rich and poor, the factory and the magnate, the social hutterfly and the drudge, the stern fanatic and the epicurean. It is not only Jermie who lives with us, but also her broading father and contrasting types of men and women following out a newsterious destiny.

It is a bock which does not preach a moral, but makes one felt—a moral dealing with questions actively in our minds to-day. It is a book of humanity—of real men and women. Mr. Dreiser's manuscript has been read by many men and women, both professional litterateurs and others. In not one single instance has the reading failed to efficit the tribute of absorbed interest and enthusiastic prate.

Marion Gering for Paramount Pictures

SYLVIA SIDNEY Theodore Dreiser's JENNIE GERHARDT

DONALD COOK, MARY ASTOR H.B.WARNER and EDWARD ARNOLD Directed by MARION GERING

A B.P. SCHULBERG PRODUCTION

a Garamount Picture

Sylvia Sidney as Jennie Gerhardt

Donald Cook as Lester Kane

