UNDEAD

Hollywood Undead is an American rap-rock band from Los Angeles, California , formed in 2005 At the moment, the band released three studio albums: Swan Songs (2008), American Tragedy (2011) Notes from the Underground (2013) and is preparing to release fourth album: Day of the Dead (2015). The band members at concerts and photo shoots wear masks.

The band Formation

- The band originated on June 3, 2005 from a song titled "The Kids" that Jorel Decker (J-Dog) and Aron Erlichman (Deuce) posted on the band's MySpace profile. They got positive reviews and formed a group with friends. Then J-Dog explained "Whoever was in the room at the time and played an instrument was in the band."

Conflict with Deuce

- In 2009, singer and founder of the band Deuce suddenly didn't take part in the Vatos Locos Tour. Deuce wanted a personal assistant and band should pay for him during tour months. Nobody in band didn't have assistant but he wanted. They went to the airport to fly to the next performance, but he didn't come. We called him, but he didn't pick up the phone. So Charlie Scene had to sing instead of Deuce during two weeks

Conflict with Deuce

- After Deuce's leaving the band invited Daniel Murillo perform vocal role Deuce during the tour. Daniel agreed, and finished career in a post-hardcore band Lorene Drive. In January 2010, the band officially announced his new member, giving him the alias Danny.

Masks

- At all concerts the band members wear masks, putting them well during some interviews
- The first mask appeared at the beginning of the creative ways Hollywood Undead were pretty primitive. They can be found on a few photographs of that period.

Masks

- The first mask changes experienced before release of the album Swan Songs. Each mask has another version - vocal, with a cut to his mouth. In live performances the group was to take off the mask after the first few songs.
- In one of his interviews Charlie Scene said that the group will change the masks for new album.
