

philosopher

Alan Watts

Alan Wilson Watts (6 January 1915 – 16 November 1973) was a British philosopher, writer, and speaker, best known as an interpreter and populariser of Eastern philosophy for a Western audience.

He has written more than 25 books and many articles on self-identification, the true nature of reality, the meaning of life, the concepts and images of God and happiness. In his books he writes about his experience, scientific knowledge and Western and Eastern religions, esotericism and philosophy.

- In his school years, he chose Zen Buddhism instead of Christianity and joined the Buddhist community.
- Young Watts has learned several ways of meditation over the years.

-
- He declares that the universe is a single organism, playing with itself, hiding from itself, becoming all beings in the universe, forgetting about who they really are. And the ultimate “goal” is to understand that we are IT. In this view of existence, Watts argues that our understanding of ourselves as "the ego in a bag of leather" is a myth.

Things, which we call separate,
are in fact an indivisible whole.

-
- He also taught at the university, went to lecture tours and conducted a program on radio stations.

BLACK IMPLIES WHITE SELF IMPLIES OTHER

ALAN WATTS

- He died in a dream in his house on Mount Tamalpais at the age of 58.
-

-
- My favorite Alan Watts' books are:
 - “Spirit of Zen”
 - “The Way of Zen”
 - “The Rebellious Zen”
 - “Joyous Cosmology”
 - “A Book About the Taboo on Knowing Who You Are”
 - “Dao And Zen”

thanks for attention.

