

Прозвища и характеризующие
эпитеты Английских и
Британских монархов

Lisitsina Kseniya 7-A
Lyceum № 2
Yuzhno-Sakhalinsk

English and British dynasties

Since the 9th century to nowadays the throne of Great Britain has been occupied by 11 royal dynasties:

- Saxon dynasty
- Danish dynasty
- Anglo-saxon dynasty
- Norman dynasty
- Plantagenet dynasty
- Lancaster dynasty
- York dynasty
- Tudor dynasty
- Stuart dynasty
- Hanover dynasty
- Windsor (before 1917 year – Saxe- Coburg - Gotha) dynasty

Dynasties included 61 monarch persons. A lot of them had nicknames and characterising epithets

*The nicknames and characterising epithets of the royal persons and the reason of their getting is going to be very important , significant for the research because:

- to know more about royal persons: their appearance and features of their character
- to define the peculiarities of the rule of this or that monarch
- to understand their life, customs, traditions and language better
- to broad linguistic knowledge in the field of such science as onomastics

The purposes of our research are:

- to defined of the British Monarch's characterising epithets and nicknames;
- to discover the reason of their getting

According to the purpose of our research there were find the following problems:

- To give the characteristic of monarch's full name and its separate parts;
- To give the definition to the words "epithet" and "nickname" and define the difference between them;
- To find out what kind of nicknames and characterising epithets British Monarchs had, determine the reasons of their getting;
- Study the classification of the reasons according to which the nicknames and characterising epithets were given.

The object of the research paper is onomastics of the English language.

The subject of the scientific research is proper names consisted of epithets and nicknames which were given to the English and British monarchs during their reign.

The bibliography used while preparing the report, can be separated into several groups:

- reference- books and dictionaries;
- scientific publications, which represent both monographs and articles from magazines;
- Manuals;
- the Internet resources

Methods of scientific cognition were used:

- analysis and synthesis
- comparison
- generalisation
- classification
- definition of concepts

The applied prospectively practical significance is

- in using the material on the lessons of English
- elective courses in the English language
- on extracurricular activities
- the prepared presentation can be the basis for the advanced self-learning of the British History and the English language.

Unit I.

Forms of a monarch's name.
Nicknames and characterising epithets as a part of a monarch's name

- Monarchs and other royal representatives could have several names.
- The fullest name could be made up of a long line of titles, epithets and nicknames.

For example:

The full name of the British King Henry IV sounds as:

Henry IV Lancaster, King of England, Earl of Derby, Duke of Hereford, Bolingbroke.

The separate parts of the full name can be divided into five main groups:

- - Birth name – personal name;
- - Throne name is the name which a monarch person got becoming the king;
- - Title name – includes a noble man's title;
- - Epithet stands for the title name. When saying an epithet throne number is not use;
- - Nicknames – nicknames given with the birth very often were included into the full monarch's name.

Henry IV

For example:

- King Henry IV
(according to the royal title)
- Henry Lancaster
(according to the ancestral name)
- Henry IV English
(according to the throne name)
- Henry Hereford
(according to the Duke Hereford's title)
- Henry Derby
(according to the Earl Derby's title)
- Henry Bolingbroke
(a nickname according to the birth)

For example

Richard Plantagenet,
Duke of Aquitania,
Earl D' Puate,
King of England,
Duke of Normandy,
Ear Andjuisky,
Turish and Manskiy

Richard the Lionheart
(Львиное сердце)

Unit II.

Problem of concepts "nickname" and
"epithet" in modern linguistics

Today the researchers haven't come to the common opinion concerning the term

In dictionaries by S.V. Ojegov and D.N. Ushakov the definition "nickname" means a name given to a man according to his certain feature or characteristics.

In "Synonyms dictionary" is emphasized that a nickname is a name given to somebody as a joke or mockery.

For example

- Ethelred the Unready
(Этельред Неразумный)
- Henry Blue Beard
(Генри Синяя Борода)

The classification gives rise to a discussion either

Different variants of classifications are given in the Z.P. Nikulina, D.I. Ermolovich's papers.

We have marked out those criteria of classification, which most researches had:

- according to appearance;

- according to personal qualities

The following British Monarchs are related to the first category:

For example

Richard III Crookback
(Ричард Горбун)

Edward I Longshanks
(Эдвард Длинноногий)

But it must be marked that not all nicknames revealed the reality:

For example

Sweyn I Forkbeard
(Свен Вилобородый)

William II Rufus
(Вильям Рыжий)

Nicknames given for personal qualities are related to the second category For example

Henry Well writer (Генри Хороший писец)

Edmund Ironside (Эдмунд Железнобокий)

There are some nicknames which can't be related to the categories given above For example

Henry VIII Old copper nose (Генрих VIII Старый медный нос)

Richard III Humpty- Dumpty
(Ричард Шалтай-Болтай)

Unit III.

Nicknames and characterising epithets of English and British monarchs. The classification of the reasons of getting them.

The definitions “nickname” and “characterising epithet”
the difference is not so distinct.

The theorists consider that an epithet emphasizes a person’s individuality. It replaces the title name and throne number.

For example:

The Conqueror, the Great, the Saint

Edward the Confessor
(Эдуард Исповедник)

William I the Conqueror
(Вильгельм Завоеватель)

Unit IV

Nicknames and characterising epithets of the British monarchs now

In the course of time the real rule over the country went to the English Prime Ministers, who started getting nicknames and epithets as well as they were given to royal persons earlier.

The prime-ministers of Great Britain

Margaret Thatcher
“Iron Lady”

Tony Blair
“Bushe,s poodle”
“Teflon Tony”

Gordon Brown
"The red is proud"
"Gold Brown"

David Cameron
«Direct David»

Elizabeth II «National grandmother»
(Елизавета II «Национальная бабушка»)

Conclusion:

- Nicknames and epithets play a very important part in the British monarchs' life. Some of them are the pride of the country as they reflect the most important moments in its history.
- Since 17th century nicknames and epithets have been given to the monarchs rarely. And now they are not used at all. The English prime- ministers are being given it.
- In modern onomastics the problem of the definitions “nicknames” and “epithets” and its classification has not been solved yet. The unfinished state of the linguistic process is the sign of its constant development.