

Осенний бал

Октябрь уж наступил — уж роща отряхает
Последние листья с нагих своих ветвей;
Дохнул осенний хлад — дорога промерзает.
Журча еще бежит за мельницу ручей,

Но пруд уже застыл; сосед мой поспешает
В отъезжие поля с охотою своей,
И страждут озими от бешеной забавы,
И будит лай собак уснувшие дубравы.
(А. Пушкин)

The image shows two mushrooms resting on a bed of dry pine needles and some green leaves. The mushroom on the left is whole, with a smooth, light brown to orange-tan cap. The mushroom on the right is sliced in half, revealing a thick, pale yellowish-orange gill structure. The gills are closely spaced and radiate from the center. The stem of the sliced mushroom is short and appears to have a dark, possibly hollowed-out center. The overall scene is brightly lit, highlighting the textures of the mushrooms and the surrounding forest floor.

A close-up photograph of a large mushroom growing in a grassy area. The mushroom has a smooth, brownish-red cap and a thick, light-colored stem with a fibrous texture. The surrounding environment includes green grass, some small green plants, and dry pine needles on the ground. The word "БОРОВИШ" is overlaid in large, bold, black Cyrillic letters across the middle of the image.
