1. Start with a circle for the head, then start a line behind the head, then draw a big circle for the chest, join two lines to another big circle for the rear.

2. On the hind leg, draw an upside down triangle, with a line in the center that goes beyond the triangle line, then draw a circle for the hip joint. Then on the front leg, draw a triangular shape for the shoulder and then draw a line that goes beyond the triangle shape and draw a circle for the joint.

3. On the head circle, draw a square shape for the 'muzzle'. Then continue with the hind and front leg. Draw a line that connects to the previous circles you've drawn, then draw in the legs that are further away. Start with a line for each leg, then a circle on the end for the joints.

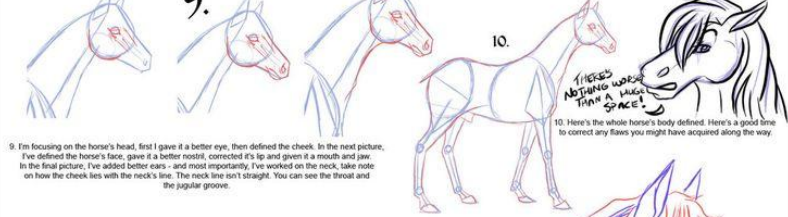

4. Draw a 'bow T' by the horse's bum this'll help align the tail. Continue with the legs, first on the legs closest to you, draw a short skew line, then a triangle shape at the ends (that'll be the hooves later). Then continue on the legs further away.

5. I've completed the legs. Then on the head, draw a faint circle where the face will be, draw triangle shapes for the ears, then a line starting from the ear and goes straight down into the chest (building the neck).

6. I've corrected the forehead shape, and added a triangle on the tip of the nose (adding lip). I've added a basic eye and lines that connect to the nostril.

7 & 8. I've begun fleshing out the hind legs, take note on how the leg closest to you joins onto the horse's body, I emphasized the line a bit. I've corrected the back. A horse's back has a very slight slope. The croup lines up with the withers. On step 8. I've fleshed out the front legs, added the breast and completed the neck, which joins in the middle of the chest (for now).

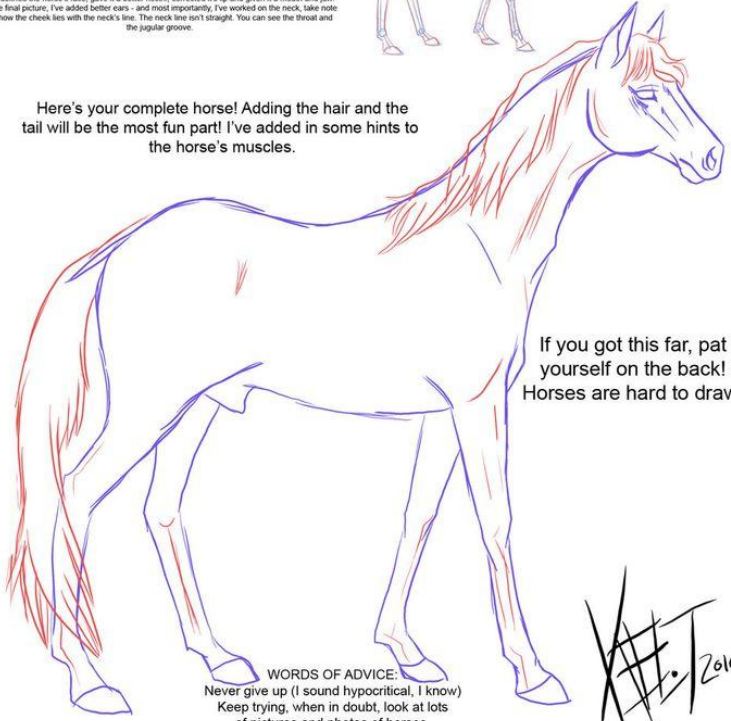

9. I'm focusing on the horse's head, first I gave it a better eye, then defined the cheek. In the next picture, I've defined the horse's face, gave it a better nostril, corrected it's lip and given it a mouth and jaw. In the final picture, I've added better ears - and most importantly, I've worked on the neck, take note on how the cheek lies with the neck's line. The neck line isn't straight. You can see the throat and the jugular groove.

10. Here's the whole horse's body defined. Here's a good time to correct any flaws you might have acquired along the way.

THESE WOULD BE NOTHING BUT SPACE!

Here's your complete horse! Adding the hair and the tail will be the most fun part! I've added in some hints to the horse's muscles.

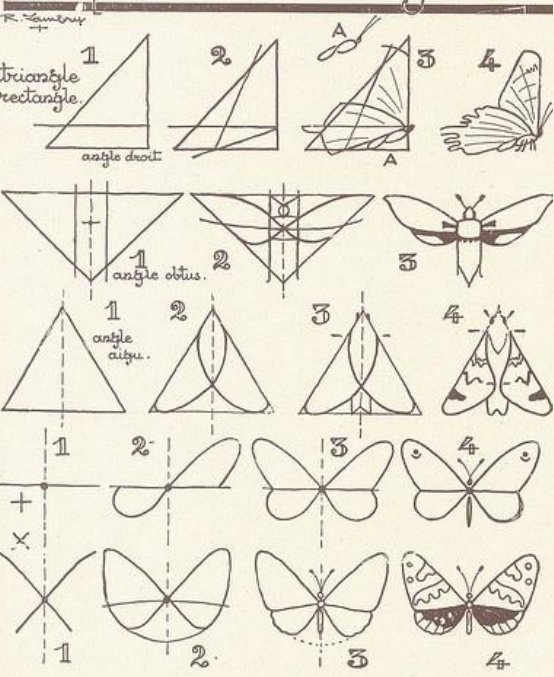

If you got this far, pat yourself on the back! Horses are hard to draw!

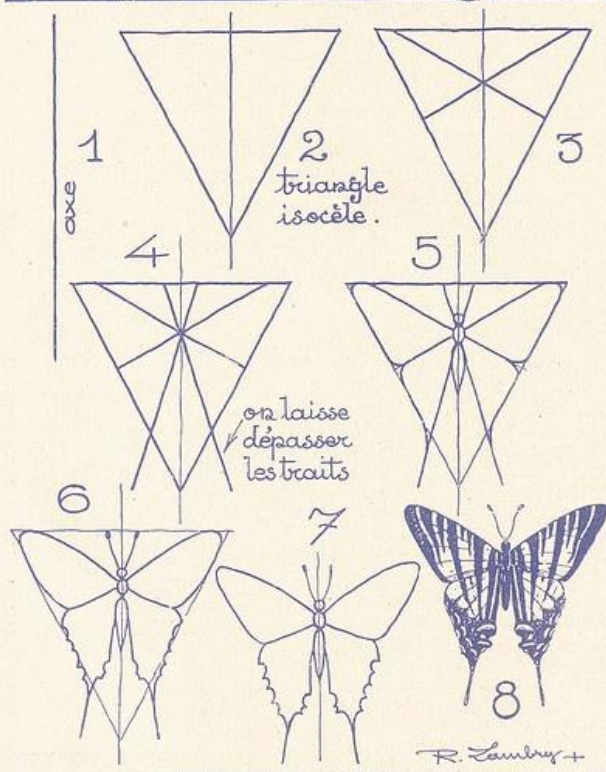

WORDS OF ADVICE:
 Never give up (I sound hypocritical, I know)
 Keep trying, when in doubt, look at lots of pictures and photos of horses, maybe you'll spot what you're doing wrong.
