In the third century DC, the Roman Emperor Claudius II forbade the legions to marry - they said that the presence of spouses weakens the fighting spirit of a warrior. But to fall in love with his soldiers mighty Emperor could not prevent. And there was a priest who secretly married couples. His name was Valentine.

When Claudius II found out about this, he got angry and gave orders to arrest the rebellious priest and to execute him. Ironically, Valentine was secretly in love with padrone's daughter. And before his execution Valentine gave her father a farewell letter in which he confided in a girl in love:

Evil priest was executed on February 14, but a few centuries later and he was remembered and became regarded as the Saint patron of lovers. So the day of execution Valentine's day became the day of lovers.

The Customs Of Valentine's Day

For many centuries people in different countries have accumulated a lot of beliefs and traditions which associated with this day and help you find love. So, in Wales on February 14 men give the ladies wooden spoons, decorated with hearts, with the locking holes and keys. It meant: "You found a way to my heart".

In medieval England, young people, those Valentine. They gathered together, were put into a hat pieces of parchment with the names of interested girls and drew lots. The girl whose name was given to the young man, for the whole year was his "Valentine", and he is the "Valentine". He invited her to the balls, played the lute, behaved like a real knight. By the way, this comic relation often ended strong and happy marriage.

The most famous tradition: giving objects of admiration Valentine cards, little notes with declaration of love. It was invented by the gallant Frenchmen, who wrote the ladies hearts messages - quatrains. Today it is popular in our country.

In America a man gives his bride a red and white candy in boxes in the shape of a heart. Red means passion, while his meaning intensity and purity of love.

The Japanese made this day a celebration of men. And, there is a competition for the stodiest recognition: boys and girls climb on the platform and was struggling, screaming about their feelings. The French and Americans often write their names on the leaves - "leaf writing" - and hang them up.

In Poland, always on February 14 the custom is to go to the mountains in Tatras, where the relics of Saint Valentine, and over the mountain hangs his miraculously iron. Single people making the pilgrimage to the mother country, believe that Valentine will help them find a mate. In addition, there is a belief that it is necessary to eat the name of the first mate, and an unmarried girl on Valentine's day, to learn the name of the future husband.

And look at the sky, say Spaniards - because of different adventures, till - husband is a wonderful family man, well, if you are bold enough to see him - wait! Prince on a white horse coming soon. And he sure to celebrate February 14 - those, who are in a single, Valentine will help to strengthen relationships and those, who are single will point the way to the second half!
