how come two wrongs don't make a right?"

EXAMPLES OF FALLACIES II

1. Ducks are birds.
2. Ducks swim in the water.
3. Chickens are birds.
4. False Conclusion: Chickens swim in the water.

EXAMPLES OF FALLACIES III

“ You cannot prove that there are not Martians living in a red dust desert here’s a fortiori of living. i. socialises as on the surface of Mars so it is reasonable for me to believe there are.”

TYPES OF FALLACIES

Logical Fallacy	Definition	Example
Ad Hominem	An attack against a person's character instead of against an argument.	Tom dresses like a nerd! How could he run for president of student council?
Hasty Generalization	When a claim draws a conclusion based on insufficient evidence.	Women are bad drivers.
Begging the Question	When the claim is included in the evidence, so nothing is proved.	Since I'm not lying, I must be telling the truth.
False Authority or Testimonial	When someone who is not an expert gives testimony.	I bought a Harley Davidson because Arnold Schwarzenegger says it's the best motorcycle.
Either-Or Fallacy	When only two options are given when many more are available.	Either you're a Republican, or you're socialist and un-American!

CLASSROOM DISCUSSION

Do you think fallacies are important in Global Perspectives? Why?

<https://owl.english.purdue.edu/owl/resource/659/03/>

Arguments can be divided into:

OBJECTIVE arguments are often those that have to do with reason, evidence and logic, generally dealing with material questions (things that can be sensed or measured and have to do with the real outside world, outside of oneself).

Ex. We know the Earth travels around the sun because we have scientific evidence that proves it.

<https://owl.english.purdue.edu/owl/resource/659/03/>

How can we know if an argument is a fallacy?

SUBJECTIVE arguments are most often those dealing with the personal situation, feelings or experiences of a particular individual, family or group.

Ex. Europeans are racist because I travelled to France and I had a bad experience with some locals due to the color of my skin.

GUESS IF THIS STATEMENT IS OBJECTIVE OR SUBJECTIVE

"I prayed for rain and it rained. So pray works!
I prayed for rain and it rained. So pray works!

GUESS IF THIS STATEMENT IS OBJECTIVE OR SUBJECTIVE

“I know the bible is true because it’s the word of god, and I know it’s the word of god cause the bible is true”.

GUESS IF THIS STATEMENT IS A FALLACY? III

"We don't know what natural force that produced the first life form, so it must have been a supernatural."

FALLACIES

Fallacies are important because they help us to separate and identify what is an Objective and a Subjective argument.

Objective

subjective

ARGUMENTS

1. An argument is a conclusion together with the premises that support it.
2. A conclusion is a claim that is supported by a premise.
3. A premise is a reason offered as support for another claim.

ARGUMENTS

OBJECTIVE arguments are often those that have to do with reason, evidence and logic, generally dealing with material questions (things that can be sensed or measured and have to do with the real outside world, outside of oneself).

Ex. We know the Earth travels around the sun because we have scientific evidence that proves it.

ARGUMENTS

SUBJECTIVE arguments are most often those dealing with the personal situation, feelings or experiences of a particular individual, family or group.

Ex. Europeans are racist because I travelled to France and I had a bad experience with some locals due to the color of my skin.

CLASSROOM ACTIVITY

In the real world the mass media sometimes mix objective with subjective arguments in order to convince the audience and change people's mind about a specific topic. Be able to distinguish one from another is very important to avoid being manipulated.

Try to find objectives and subjectives arguments in the following texts.
