Functional and dysfunctional consequences

The background is a dark blue gradient with several glowing, overlapping geometric shapes in a lighter blue color. These shapes include rectangles, triangles, and irregular polygons, some of which are slightly offset from each other, creating a sense of depth and movement. The overall effect is a complex, layered pattern of light and shadow.

Conflict Consequences

CONFLICT

Conflicts by types (consequences)

functional

- The result is acceptable for everyone
- More desire for the further co-operation

dysfunctional

- Less working effectiveness
- No desire to compromise in the future
- “the-other-party-being-an-enemy” idea
- Displacement of interests

5 Ways What a CEO Can

Do

- Competitive style – based on power, means winner and loser in a conflict
- Dissociation style - lower level of persistence and no looking for co-operation
- Compromising style – temperate persistence and wish for co-operation
- Adaptation style – desire for co-operation and lower persistence on decision
- Co-operation style
