

Multicultural Russia

The presentation by Dasha and Ulyana

11B

The native people of Russia is 93% of the population, of which over 81% - Russian. Over 6% of the population - the people of the Middle (5%, for example, Ukrainians, Armenians, etc.) and Far (1%, for example, Germans, Koreans, etc.) abroad.

Russia's Ethnic Republics

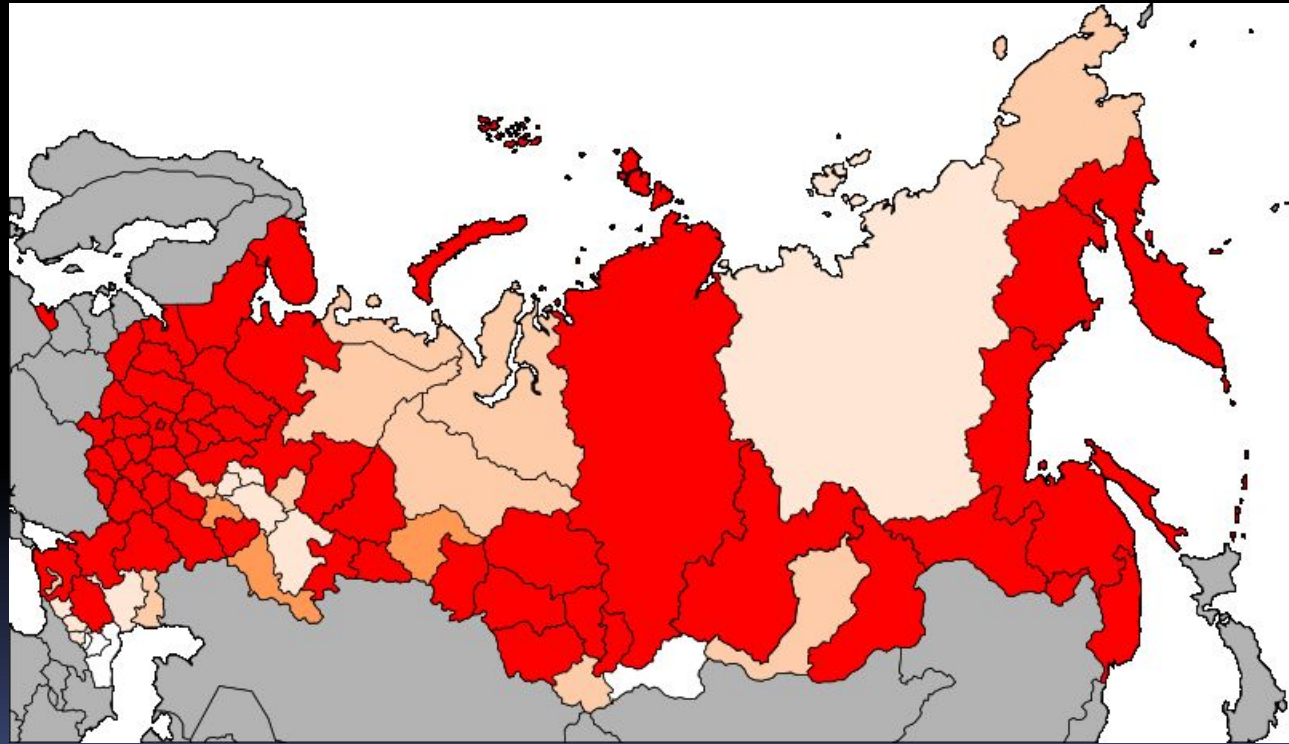

Population facts of Russia (by 2010)

- Russians 111,016,896 (80.90%)
- Ukrainians 1,930,000 (1.41%)
- Armenians 1,180,000 (0.86%)
- Belarusians 521,443 (0.38%)
- Germans 394,138 (0.29%)
- Ossetians 528,515 (0.39%)
- Roma 204,958 (0.15%)
- Tajiks 200,303 (0.15%)
- Moldovans 156,400 (0.12%)
- Greeks 85,640 (0.06%)
- Poles 47.125 (0.04%)
- Lithuanians 31,377 (0.03%)
- Bulgarians 24,038 (0.02%)
- Latvians 18,979 (0.01%)

Over 185 ethnic groups live in Russia at the moment

There are 1,473,754 people live in Novosibirsk and this city is the third biggest one.

Mind that it's a popular place with potential migrants from Kazakhstan and Middle Asia.

Why do people leave home for Russia?

The statistics says there's a tendency that there are more migrants who's not Russian than emigrants who are of Russian origin

