Demchenko Nastya 9A

- If I had the choice, what book to recommend to my class, I would choose «The House, in Which...»
- The author - Mariam Petrosyan.

■ Mariam Petrosyan (born August 10, 1969[1],Yerevan) — Armenian writer and artist, writing in Russian, author of the novel "the House in which..." and the fairy tale "the Tale of the dog who could fly".

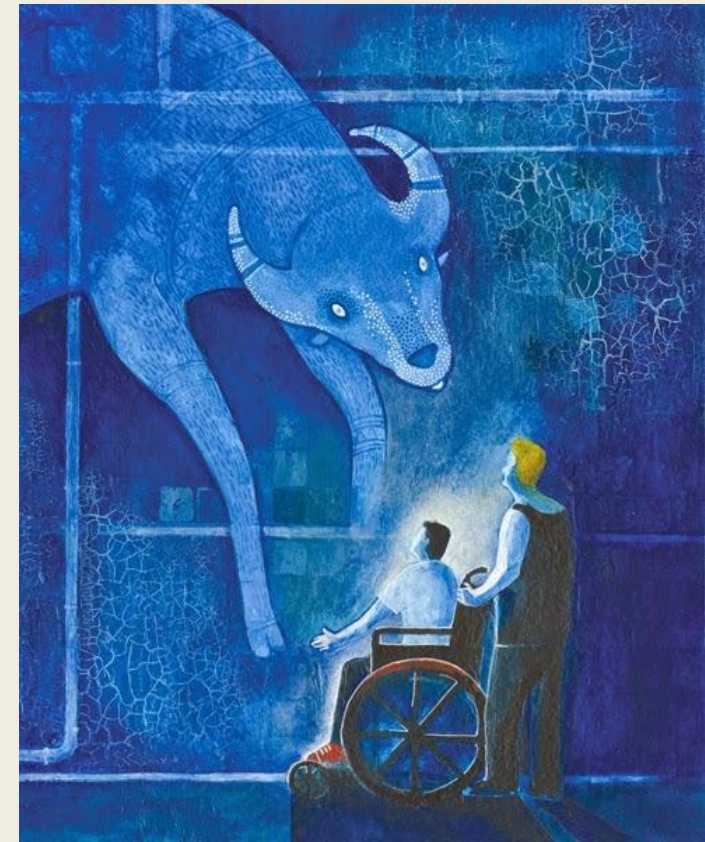

"The house in which..." is the first book of the writer. From the moment you start working on it in 1991 prior to the publication of books in 2009 was about 18 years old. We are talking about it right after the book was published and soon the novel brought the author of "the Russian award".

- The book, the edition I have, consists of three volumes, each of them nice art of one of the characters.

- On the back of the book it is written reviews of various media personalities. For example, the writer Dmitry Bykov writes: "The house in which..." is a great piece, and very well could be, the door to the very new literature, we've been waiting for.

- This is a book with a unique atmosphere. The plot is unpredictable. From the first pages the book captures. Each character is thought out. Any person will find a favorite hero. The house after reading the book not just a book, and a part of you.
