Scotland

Saint Andrew's Cross

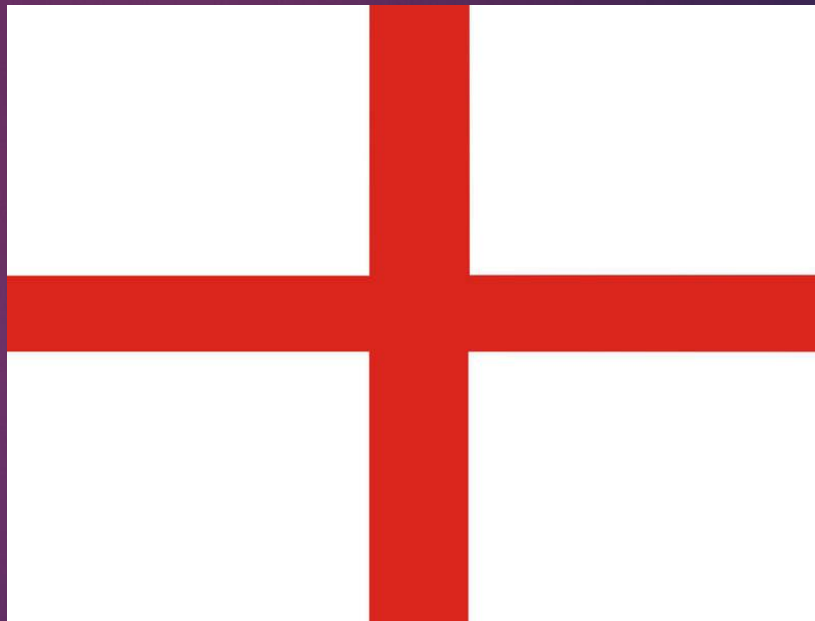

The national flag of Scotland is the Saltire. It is made up of a great white cross which spans diagonally across the flag on a blue background. This was the supposed shape of the cross that St. Andrew was put to death on and therefore the flag is also known as the 'Cross of St. Andrew'.

England

St. George's Cross

The national flag of England bears a red colored cross on a white background. The cross stretches from right to left and top to bottom, its intersection in the center of the rectangle, and is known as St. George's Cross.

Wales

The Red Dragon

The flag of Wales consists of two horizontal halves - the top half is white and the bottom half is green. In the center of the Welsh flag is a red dragon. The exact representation of the dragon is not standardized and many different interpretations exist.

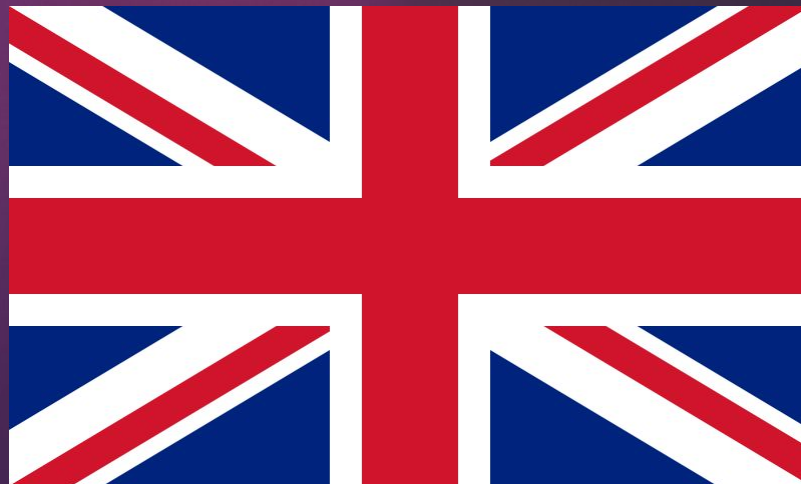

Northern Ireland

The Ulster Banner

This was a civil flag for Northern Ireland, but the status of this was abolished when the Belfast Stormont assembly was closed down in 1973. Thereafter, the Union Flag was made official for all purposes in Northern Ireland.

During official events, the British government uses the Union Flag, which is the official flag of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Northern Ireland, and is the only flag used by the government in Northern Ireland.

The image shows a close-up, slightly blurred view of the Union Jack flag, the national flag of the United Kingdom. The flag's characteristic white saltire (St. Andrew's Cross) is set against a red field, with blue cantons in the four quadrants. The fabric of the flag appears to be waving, creating soft folds and highlights. Centered over the flag is the text "The Union Jack" in a white, bold, serif font, which is underlined.

NATIONAL SYMBOLS OF THE UK

10

Each country in Britain has its own patron saint and floral emblem:

RED ROSE

11

The national flower of England is the rose. The flower has been adopted as England's emblem since the time of the Wars of the Roses - civil wars (1455-1485) between the royal house of Lancaster (whose emblem was a red rose) and the royal house of York (whose emblem was a white rose).

THISTLE

12

The national flower of Scotland is the thistle, a prickly-leaved purple flower which was first used in the 15th century as a symbol of defence.

SHAMROCK

13

The national flower of Northern Ireland is the shamrock, a three-leaved plant similar to clover. An Irish tale tells of how Patrick used the three-leaved shamrock to explain the Trinity. He used it in his sermons to represent how the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit could all exist as separate elements of the same entity. His followers adopted the custom of wearing a shamrock on his feast day.

LEEK and DAFFODIL

14

The national flower of Wales is the daffodil, which is traditionally worn on St. David's Day. The vegetable called leek is also a traditional emblem of Wales.

One of the most widespread languages on the planet

English today is probably the third largest language by number of native speakers, after Mandarin Chinese and Spanish

Approximately 375 million people speak English as their first language. English is the official language in 54 countries and 27 non-sovereign entities.

The countries with the highest populations of native English speakers are, in descending order: the United States (226 million), the United Kingdom (61 million), Canada (18.2 million), Australia (15.5 million), Nigeria (4 million), Ireland (3.8 million), South Africa (3.7 million), and New Zealand (3.6 million).

English as a second language

I WANT YOU TO SPEAK ENGLISH

The number of second language speakers vary greatly from 470 million to over a billion.

The number of non-native speakers is thrice more than the number of native speakers.

The lingua franca

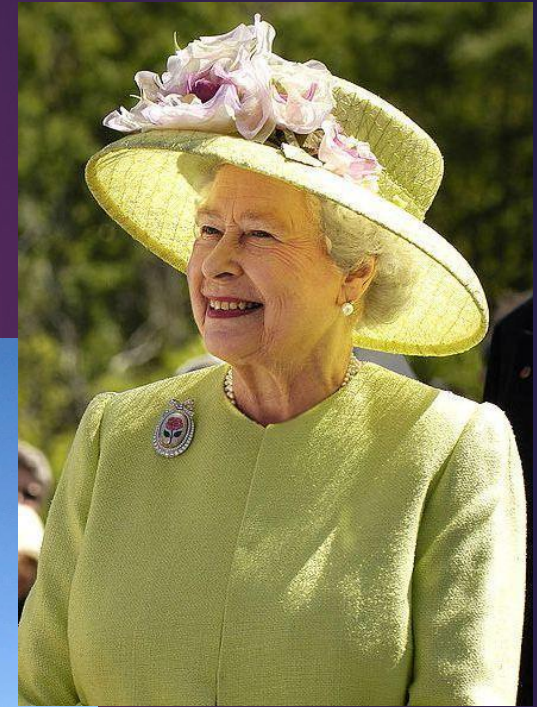

English is so widely spoken, so it has often been referred to as a "world language", and while it is not an official language in most countries, it is currently the language most often taught as a foreign language.

A lot of modern literature is in English, it is commonly used in the Internet and in press.
